Ann Landers

(Continued from Page 25) are slipping away—she needs more affection. A middle-aged man, also married, and in their social crowd, confides that he has been smitten by her for years. His wife is cold and unfriendly. If it weren't for the children he'd get a divorce. How unfortunate that they didn't meet 20 years ago!

After a few months of sneaking around, the Romeo becomes tired of her and suggests they'd better stop seeing each other "for awhile" because his wife is getting wise. So the lady gets the brushoff, plus a heartache and humiliation.

I almost believed his lies until I suddenly realized the familiar ring of my letter. I know now my affair was just like the others—cheap and meaningless. Perhaps this letter will awaken some other middle-aged women who feel the need for excitement. — MY NAME IS LEGION

Dear Legion: Thanks for a frank and humble letter. I can add nothing.

Confidential to TAKEN ADVANTAGE OF: Who raised those vegetables? Your children are selfish and lazy because they have never been taught to accept responsibility. Your husband has been leaning pretty good, too. So long as you are willing to carry the whole load I can assure you they will be glad to let you do it.

Funny how he always asks for a bank reference.

To someone who doesn't know you, there is no better reference than your banker. Because credit is his business, a banker is in the best position to vouch for your dependability. That's why a word from him can often smooth the way for any financial transaction—whether you're buying a car, building a home, starting a business or opening a charge account at the corner store. One of the best ways to get a bank reference is to have a savings account. Why not open one today?
