TV to Probe Treatment of Mental Ills

By ERNIE KREILING Herald TV Columnist The development of new drugs has been the most widely publicized and dramatic stride taken in the treatment of mental illness in recent years.

But equally important and less heralded has been the concept of the therapeutic community, where patients are put into as nearly normal situations as possible. In fact subtraction to very real pressures and deadlines, as opposed to the older concept of sanctuary from them, is now part of the road to recovery. Monday at 9 p.m., KTLA Channel 5, airs an hour documentary. The Split Image, a close-in look at a phase of such a program at Camarillo State Hospital.

THE PROJECT is CHS-TV, a closed-circuit television station operated entirely by patients and seen on nearly a hundred TV sets throughout the hospital. CHS-TV airs about 12 hours of programing a week, including news of hospital events, spelling bees, mental programs, and even group therapy sessions. The station has been operating for a year, during which time more than 300 patients have been involved. Most of them have been discharged from the hospital, only three having been re-admitted. This re-admission rate is about one tenth of the hospital's over-all rate, a fact that speaks well of the TV operation. The Split Image, narrated by Bill Stout, is an interesting look at a new and imaginative approach to treatment of mental illness.

El Camino Alum Wins European Art Grant

With the prospect of three years of study and travel in Europe ahead, Richard Ellis, former art student of El Camino College, will begin in September what he describes as "the greatest adventure in my life."

Ellis is the recipient of a possible 3-year, $3,000 a year fellowship granted to him by the American Academy in Rome, so that he may continue his study in the field of art, with sculpturing as his specialty.

NOW A STUDENT at the Otis Art Institute in Los Angeles, Ellis was one of more than 100 college students in the United States to submit examples of sculpturing talent for evaluation.

"With this fellowship, I will have a studio provided for me in Rome, and I will also be able to travel all over Western Europe, learning about art in the various countries," Ellis remarked.

"I will not study at any particular school or art institute, but instead I will 'create' my own," he added.

ELLIS, SON OF Mr. and Mrs. Jack Chaddick, Gardena, began thinking seriously of art as a career when he began his college education at El Camino in 1957.

"Here the foundation was built for my further schooling, with El Camino's art department," Ellis commented.

Two weeks ago, Ellis flew to a New York luncheon engagement at the expense of the Academy and there was notified that he was selected winner of the fellowship. Details of the journey and his responsibilities were outlined for him in New York.

"THE ACADEMY gives these grants on a yearly basis with the first year of living in Rome guaranteed, and the second one almost assured if the student desires," Ellis said.

"If he wishes to stay in Europe when the third year comes, it is very likely that he will be able to," the fellowship winner added.

The Academy in Rome awards similar fellowships in other fields, including painting, literature, history and classical studies.

"I WILL BE going over in September to relax and prepare for life in Rome, but the grant does not actually begin until Oct. 1," the former EC student remarked.

"In Rome, I will be able to consult with 'artists in residence' who are famous artists employed by the academy to consult with fellowship students," he observed.

"After my study in Rome, which I think will be primarily in the field of sculpturing, I plan to become an art instructor," Ellis concluded.
