Hospital Staff 'Blacklisting' Under New Fire

By VINCENT THOMAS
Assemblyman, 68th District

Medical care is one of the most sensitive areas the Legislature is called upon to deal with. As lawmakers, we can never forget that your good health is your most precious possession. However, the problems of developing laws which will make available to you the best and most progressive care are exceedingly complex, and cannot be solved hurriedly.

A convincing demonstration of how ticklish a medical problem can be was given at a recent meeting of a subcommittee of the Assembly Interim Committee on Public Health. Under consideration was a bill from the 1963 Regular Session, which proposed enactment of a state "fair hospital practices act." The bill sought to attack alleged "blacklisting" of some physicians by hospitals, under which they are denied membership on the staff of particular hospitals, and are thereby prohibited from treating their patients in them.

WITNESSES maintained that the tightly knit structure of hospital staffs permits their physician members to arbitrarily deny admission to newcomers out of pure caprice, willfulness, racial or other discrimination, as well as open competition. It was said that the problem varies as between types of hospitals, being the least in publicly owned institutions — county or city hospitals, only a minor factor in private, proprietary ones, but being the most evident in voluntary nonprofit hospitals. This latter type is most important, however, because it is dominant in urban centers.

The bill would prohibit hospitals from denying staff members to a doctor unless he violated reasonable and well-defined standards of professional conduct. It would require the granting of a full, fair hearing to any doctor to whom staff membership is denied, and would permit appeals to the State Board of Public Health, and the courts. Powers of enforcement would be lodged in the State Department of Public Health. Failure to act on an application for membership would be grounds for a hearing, thus ending the possibility of blacklisting by silent treatment.

ONE SOUTHERN California doctor testified that he had been a senior staff member of a prominent hospital until he entered into a group medical care contract with a labor union. Year by year afterward he said he was steadily demoted, until last year he was not reappointed. As he said, some patients, not knowing the full truth, assume accordingly that the physician is "an abortionist, a deviate, or a drunkard." Then they steer away, and don't return.

Another physician, also connected with a group plan, said conditions are better now than when the plan started in 1939, but that the discrimination then practiced against him and his colleagues can happen again without legal protection.

The attention of the subcommittee was called to a national magazine article of two years ago, in which the prevalence of such blacklisting was reviewed. It was then estimated that about half the practicing physicians in the country lacked staff status.

THE ONLY opposition to the bill was voiced by the chief of the bureau of hospitals of the State Health Department, who said that practice in hospitals is a privilege, not a right, and that hospitals now do a good job of maintaining high medical standards.

Medical and hospital association spokesmen, who had opposed the bill during the session, told the subcommittee that they are now agreed doctors should be entitled to hearing if they are denied or suspended from staff membership.
