you for writing.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband's mother, who was a dear, sweet person passed away recently. Her relation-ship with her two daughters ship with her two daugners was not good. In the 20 years I have been in the family, my mother-in-law had suffered considerable anguish due to the selfishness of her daugh-

She was not a wealthy woman but was a collector of exquisite antiques and silver. She frequently told me she'd like me to have these objects when she passes on.

The day before the funeral her daughters went through her home and helped themselves to everything of value.

My husband is furious. He feels we should demand that they share some of his moth-er's treasures with us. I want no part of such a family fight. What is your opinion?—PRE-EMPTED

Dear Emptied: I'm with you. Nothing of material value could possibly be worth the ugliness which would surely result from getting into a hassle with the vul-

It's too bad your mother-jn-law didn't put her generous intentions in writing. This is the only way to make sure that worldly goods will be disposed of in accordance with the wishes of the owner.
