Your Right to Know Is the Key to All Your Liberties Torrance Herald Established 1914 GLENN W. PFEIL Publisher REID L. BUNDY - Managing Editor

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 20, 1964

The State and Schools

Efforts to increase state participation in the financing of local school district costs received a positive boost from Assemblyman Charles E. Chapel with the introduction of his Assembly Bill 43 calling for the state to divert some of the horse racing money now going to state and local fairs and put it into schools instead.

In explaining his action in his weekly column, Assemblyman Chapel contends that fairs which are propped up by state funds despite public support probably deserve to be dropped and that the publicly supported fairs can get along quite well with a little less state money.

While probably not a complete answer to California's school financing problems, it is a step in the direction of relieving the property owner of the dubious honor of being the principal source of school money.

Among other plans advanced to increase the state's participation in school financing is one endorsed last week by the Torrance board of education.

The new move, Total Opportunity in the Public Schools (T.O.P.S.), is designed to impress California's legislators with the need for added state financing to relieve the spiraling burden on local property owners in supporting good schools.

Earlier, the Torrance board of education had opened a drive to bring about a state initiative constitutional amendment which would assure a constant level of state financing for schools.

Fears expressed by several local school officials bear consideration, however. The sudden outpouring of ideas, plans, petitions, and bills may only dilute the drive for state help. We hope not. We hope such activities throughout the State will inform those in Sacramento that Californians still think schools are more important than many of the other activities which draw generous state support. To this conclusion, The HERALD can subscribe without a qualm.

Washington's Prayer

"Almighty God, we make our earnest prayer that Thou wilt keep the United States in Thy holy protection; that Thou wilt incline the hearts of the citizens to cultivate a spirit of subordination and obedience to government; to entertain a brotherly affection and love for one another and for their fellow citizens of the United States at large." Such was the supplication of George Washington after his inauguration as President of the United States.

If he looks down at us today from his Valhalla he must see disobedience advocated as the key to human rights; brotherly hatred and disaffection in many, many hearts. And he couldn't be blamed for wondering "Am I the father of that country?

Yet Washington would understand the hatred, the disobedience as products of human frailities little different from those which plagued his times. And he could well murmur to all who will listen another of his admonitions: "Labor to keep alive in your breast that little spark of celestial fire conscience.'

If we do that, and persevere in doing it, eventually our first president's inaugural prayer will be answered in full.

We Quote...

University.

The state has been increas

BRITAIN FRANCE

Yangui Not Dare Shoot At Fidel-

MIGHT HEET

HEES

FRANS

ROYCE BRIER

DeGaulle, Mao, Franco; Who Will Succeed Them? have solved nothing Premier

has emerged who is for prac-The problem of succession to the seats of power is plagu-ing a good many nations to-day, probably a larger pro-portion than ever before in history. tical purposes a constitutional dictator by the consent of his people.

A foremost case in the news is that of Prime Minis-ter Nehru. Free Indians know It is a problem which has always bothered both repub-lics and oligarchies, the little Greek city-states, not to menter Nenru. Free Indians know no other chief of state, but he suffered a stroke last month. Perhaps you saw tele-vised pictures of him in the Republic Day celebration, his physical capacity somewhat concealed from the cameras. tion republican and even imtion republican and even im-perial Rome. Monarchies of course are different, and while disorder and conten-tion has often followed the death of a monarch, the suc-cession method is always set-tled The man chosen as his suc-cessor made almost no im-pression in an interview.

Another important enigma is President de Gaulle, de-Our own case is now in an acute stage because the Con-stitution provided for a make-shift arrangement when a President died to be succeedspite his apparent good health. The French constitu-tion, virtually dictated by him, provides for succession, but de Gaulle is so much France, at the moment, that any succession apparents to be ed by a vice president. So we lack a vice president for a year, and few are satisfied with the present statutory any succession appears to be a technicality, and a dubious

* * The other non-monarchial

- A Bookman's Notebook-New Arthur Miller Play

William Hogan

reality.

the neurosis of the Millerfigure in the recent American experience, Marilyn Mon-Monroe marriage.

"I'm a joke to most peo-ple," Maggie (Marilyn) says at one point. And Quentin (Mil-ler), describing himself as a fraud, explains: "Because I should how armed the WAS roe, Miller's second wife. The play may be about the fall of Eve, with Miller saying in effect that one begins to live only after the loss of should have agreed she WAS a joke . . . Why did I lie to her, play this cheap benefac-tor?" (In admitting her role as a "joke" Magie takes on more dignity than her hus-band.) one's innocence; that one must accept himself as he is, which is less than what he wants to be. But the mechanics and fireworks of the text fade in a reader's mind. He becomes aware only of band.) Again, Quentin: "A suicide kills two people, Maggie

AFTER HOURS By John Morley Arab Power Plays Keep

still nomadic.

anon, where 55 per cent its population is Christian over the Arab world.

The secret British-French deal in 1916 divided Arab real estate into spheres of in-

Middle East in Turmoil JERUSALEM, JORDAN have arrived here from the Biblical roads of Damascus, Jerico and the Jordan river to the wall dividing Jerusa-lem between the Arab and Indeed, revolutionary changes have come to the Middle East in the thirty-odd years I have been covering it -and living in it. For one

The Middle East today is the world's greatest political contradiction. Arab unity has been a myth for centuries .... today it's like trying to put life into an Egyptian mummy. fuence, and under an "in-side" deal in the League of Nations, France took Syria and Lebanon . . . and Britain

Most observers over-simplify the Arab Middle East with capsule tranquilizers catering to the contradictions with the winds of prejudice or expediency. Some foreign observers and researchers seem to view this spectacle as a kind of side show of the Arabian nights

The Arab Middle East today The Arab Middle East today is buried beneath its own vio-lent sands... torn between its religion and superstitions ... between oil riches and starvation... between veils and nylons... and between political opportunists who "wheel and deal" with any-one who promises a bigger one who promises a bigger Cadillac or a bigger plate of pilaff.

As the governor of Jerusa-lem, Jordan Daoud Abu Gha-zaleh, put it to me this week before my talk to Rotary, Khrushchev, almost 70, worked his way out of the The answer is still in the "collective leadership" after Stalin's death, but there is no hands of the Gods."

The new Arab socialist movement, Baath (Renais-sance party) rules Syria and sance party) rules syria and Iraq, but engages in plots and counter-plots to gain control of Pan-Arabia's broad arch from Morocco to Iraq. Egypt is split with a crisis in Yemen with Saudi Arabia , and a drain on her re-sources in an effort to bail

Ben Bella's Algeria out of a oroccan war. Jordan is in the middle of Jordan is in the middle of the worst Arab power play in centuries, wondering where the carving of the abortive state will begin . . , and whether Israel will beat Egypt to the punch. Nasser's dream of putting all Arab oil under a unified state (Egypt's of course) has been shattered by the owners of the oil themselves. The "strong men" are the product of political turmoil of the past quarter-century and many depend on their legends for a considerable part of their strength. But legends do not grow over-night, and none are being made by candidates for suc-cession in countries which of the oil themselves. Pan-Arabism has many champions today, as it had for centuries. The difference in the past is that they all blamed the Europeans for their disunity. Now they blame each other. Even Zion-ism has been left to cool in the old fining new Ism has been left to cool in the old frying pan. Nasser is still the boss in the Middle East. He may yet unite enough of Arabia to bring success to his revolu-tion. The Baath or anyone else has not one to match him him

The answer to the Arab Middle East dilemma is in Russia... not in Cairo, Baghdad, Damascus, Algiers or Rabat. Although Nasser's U.A.R. (United Arab Republic) lost Syria, he still keeps the two stars on his Egyptian flag, where previously he carried only one. "You never know," he said in Cairo today, "when we may again need it."

we may again need it." When natives here discuss the Middle East, they of course exclude Israel which is ridiculate political values raised new ideological concepts, long buried in nationalist tradi-One tenth of these masses With the exception of Leb

.U

By

Ass On Asse to 1

scho

free Legis

Capit Pleas No.

Extra

will send a st enve

refer

refe

Com ture Mare

of th

the floor if 4

bill,

IN

will

• to t 21 s

the

for may

the

Sen in t

turi

con Am the

T Bill

for the levy

any a c rac Sta

Lou age tion

ran and bea pub sub Cha

Sta

but Yei 196

goi she cou pu she Ju she Ju she cer she wa the $1

ful ch see mi pu Bi lav

to Fa op ca di pu

1 st

٠ cha

M

The collapse of this society, the rest of the Arab Middle although often feudal and cor rupt in practice, had an ele-ment of stability. But the new Arab independence contained East is overwhelmingly Mos-But even Islam is not a unifying force like Christian-ity . . . because it is bitterly divided into sects and cults mostly the seeds of violence, revolution and authoritarian rule — much the same as now emerging in African iawith all the superstitions and fears born of illiteracy, hope-lessness and cruelty. dependence, except that the Arab Middle East has enor-mous oil wealth . . . and the prize is formidable. With the collapse of the Ottoman empire after World War I in 1918, Europe took

The political vacuum left by the European powers has aggravated the nationalist as-pirations of the Arab intellec-tuals formerly employed by the Europeans. The present leaders - Nasser, Aflak. Aflak, 9 leaders ... Nasser, Aflak, Ben Bella, Sallal, Imam are all cut from the same cloth ... but all going in different directions to attain their and Leoanon . . . and Briain all the rest. World War II brought so-cial and political changes and independence to all Arab al and political changes and goals. dependence to all Arab . The 'epidemic' in the Mid-nuntries. dle East is Arab . . not Is-The collapse of European rael or Jew, or European.

Our Man Hoppe Now Spacemen Battle Monsters

Art Hoppe

Leaping lunar lizards! What an opportunity. Insider's Newsletter reports a new radio space opera is in the works. The hero's going to be an astronaut. You know, real life science fiction. And they need scripts.

It's right up my alley. As a boy, I read all the science fiction I could lay my hands on: Buck Rogers, Flash Gordon, John Carter and the four-armed green men of Mars. Ah, what noble heroes. And, ah, what glorious villains: the Hairy Spiders of Jupiter, the Octopus Women of Venus, the Blob, the thing, the Giant Nasal Drip from Outer Space.

What battles! What conflict! And to think those boyhood dreams have at last become reality. For, as Mr. Robert Whitney, the producer of new space opera says: "I expect many things that happen to U.S. astronauts will be the basis for our plots."

So I've been checking over what's been happening to our U. S. astronauts lately. And I think I've got the basis for a great plot. th t'r Hi there, kids, and you grown up folks too. It's time for another thrilling adventure with Colonel Glen Flash, Hero Astronaut. As we join Colonel Flash today, he's in his Secret Headquarters, grimly talking things over with his aides, Buck Ace and Ace Buck. (Sound effects: The whirring, purring, humming and beeping of fantastic science-fiction-type machines.) FLASH: How does it look men?

ACE: Not so good, Flash. Our LACTIC VII Orbital Computator reports the Evil Enemy is threatening to conquer vast areas of our territory. Secret messages have come in from the President and the Attorney General saying you are their only hope.

FLASH: Are the people fighting back? BUCK: That's just it, Flash. As you know, the Evil Enemy has this awesome Brainwashing Power. Somehow, they manage to convince the people they are their friends. The Evil Enemy takes over. And then, of course, it's too late.

ACE: We're trying to analyze this Brainwashing Power on the RATPACK XII Analyzer, Flash. So we can counter it.

FLASH: Right. We must show the people what the Evil Enemy looks like: pale green with magenta eyes, slimy horns, bloody fangs, and clutching claws. I am off men, to warn the people' Let's get this campaign off the ground.

BUCK: Five, four, three, two, one. Mimeographs functioning A-okay. All press release systems go. FLASH: Keep 'em humming. Remember, men it is up to us alone to save Ohio for the Democratic Party!

Well, I don't know about the plot. It's better than "Flash Defeats the Rival Motel Syndicate." Or: "Flash eats the Life Negatistors" But it seems to lack the

My father and mother were married the same day. - Boy when asked by teacher for examples of coincidence. * * *

As a parent whose love of ing its degree of control and decreasing its proportion of support for public schools.— Ben Kellner, President of California Teachers Associa-

Unless a school is able to educate its children so they may become competent and responsible citizens, its works is a temporary stop-gap that relieves immediate suffering only. — James B. Connant, former president of Harvard

the United States is based on trust in God's love for her. I cannot understand how we are to remain 'God's country' if our children are told that the very mention of God in school is unconstitutional. — Mrs. Blair Clubley, Canoga Park, tled.

succession

the Saturday Evening Post printed the text of Arthur Miller's "After the Fall" just as the play opened at New York's Lincoln Center. You might have thought the Post was challenging Evergreen Review. Never had so many members of the ordained intelligentsia pounced HIS GREATNESS WILL NEVER DIE on a Post feature with such ## nations are in the same pre-dicament. This is especially true where a "strong man" The Germans solved the crisis of Herr Adenauer's ad-vanced age, but the Russians sign a sound succession has been devised. Nor is a successor to Mao in sight. The West is even less familiar with power pol-itics in Peking than in Mos-cow, but observers have been unable to name anyone of the ideological caliber of Mao.

Who will follow Franco in Spain, Tito in Yugoslavia? Or Nasser in Egypt, though Nasser is still young aad vigorous?

cession in countries which keep the democratic form, but seldom the democratic

I found the text brillian These Days and disturbing. It is Miller's artistic soul-searching. It is (From The Bible) what Elia Kazan, who di-Fear not, only believe. ---(Mark 5:36). rected the play, calls a "per-sonal drama related to the big social drama." Is it a trial, a If we but express our belief in God in the strongest of af-firmatives we will invite into religious confession, an artis-tic catharsis? Kazan said he our experience the full ex-pression of God-life and overexpected" hot arguments as to what we're doing." He and Miller got them—not merely among viewers of the play, but among readers of the come all trace of fear My Neighbors play, but among readers of * * * The work is a panorama of our times played in the mind, thought and memories of its central character, Quentin, a lawyer (or Miller, a play-wright). It concerns the in-vestigation of the McCarthy period to the pointlessness of one man's life, and the world's. The gossip quotient hinges on the play's second act—and the charge that it presents a grossly unfair "But I'm a non-conformist!" characterization of that tragic ## kills two people, Maggie. That's what it's for. So I'm re-moving myself and perhaps it will lose its point . . . " * * Reading these bedroom and Politically the Arab Middle East consists of three pseudo-republics, Egypt (UAR), Syria, barbituate scenes is an emo-tional experience. This is shattering stuff, and one ad-mires Miller as a dramatist of Eugène O'Neill dimensions. Iraq ... and one genuine, Le-banon; two constitutional monarchies, Jordan and Iran ... one absolute monarchy, Saudi Arabia ... and Yemen, where the civil war will de-But these intimate details of a recent unhappy marriage is what bothers most readers, artistic devices though they termine where it's going to may be. I have tried to ana-lyze my own depression, as well as exhilaration, in read-ing "After the Fall." It re-mains that all of us are still to close to the Monroe trag-ody. In secont it on these land

at Istanbul

Of course these political destinations are arbitrary .... for other countries like Tu-nis, Algeria Morocco and some minor political depen-dencies could be included. edy to accept it on these terms—and the Monroe story was a symbol of our times just as the Kennedy affair The "Human problems" in the Arab Middle East are at the root of most of its turbu lent history. Probably 95 per cent of its

In the Post foreword Miller notes that the play is not "about something; hopefully it is something." I remins a brilliant shocker. As the seanearly 65 million people are illiterate. Some 80 per cent of these depend on a very limited agson's cultural conversation riculture for existence. Less than 5 per cent of all their land is productive. you must read it, then analyze your own reaction.

which is attached to Europe simple charm of the science fiction in my boyhood.

I suppose the problem is mixing public herces up with politicians. For I don't think being a politician qualifies you to be a public hero. And vice versa.

Besides, if people get the idea all Republicans are little green men with fangs and claws, there's no question it could spell the end of our two-party system.

Morning Report:

To listen to the senile outrage of all the old critics and editorial writers over 21, you might think the British had burned Washington-again. Actually all that has happened is the Beatles.

Without taking an artistic stand, I see that they induce screams of joy in a lot of youngsters. Which is less dangerous than riding in a fast car. And apparently equally pleasant.

No doubt, hairwise, the Beatles are arresting. But let's not forget, the Nation already has survived the patentleather Valentino gloss, the extreme butch, the total shave, the Iroquois, and the duckbill. Personally, I don't feel the road to Hell is marked with barber poles.

Abe Mellinkoff