May Co. Presents Its 1964 'Best of Paris' Collection

Spring 1964! Once again May Co. is first to bring to style-wise women in Southern California the "Best of Paris"

. . . the essence of all the spring couture collections presented by world-famed presented by world-famed French designers.

Over 50 of these magnificent designs will be presented in a dramatic TV showing, this evening, Channel 4 KNBC, 6:30 to 7:00 p.m. and on Monday, March 23, Channel 11 KTTV, 11 to 11:30 p.m.

The entire collection will then be available in the Forecast Shop at May Co. Wilshire cast Shop at May Co. Wilshire beginning Monday, March 23. On the following Thursday, strong representations of strong representations of these fashions will be in the Crenshaw, Eastland, Lakewood, South Bay, Topanga Plaza and Valley stores.

To select this "Best of Paris" collection, May Co. sent its top buying and fashion experts to Paris in January. Bewitched and bedazzled, they made the famous "gold they made the famous "gold they bear they be in the famous "gold they b they made the famous "gold chair circuit" of the world-famed glamour salons: Patou, Chanel Capucci, Courreges, Givenchy, Balenciaga, Lanvin, Cardin, St. Laurent, Monsieur X. Plus a trio of young individualists, Chloe, Salone,

From hundreds of tantalizing designs they chose a group of superlative originals costing $1,000 to $1,800 each, these to be copied line for line and offered at May Co. at prices from $70 to $195. Equally important, they ought a great pret-a-porter collection ready-to-wear cre-ated by such fabled names as Desses, Jacques Heim, Lanvin Guy Laroche . . made and labeled in Paris, priced at May Co. from $80 to $300.

Paris fashion dictates this spring are young, gentle, lady-like and demure yet strictly female.

These qualities are emphasized in Cardin's Quaker collars, folded demurely across a neckline that's anything but demure; St. Laurent's swirls of pleats, flared, gored, often slashed; Patou's angel wing sleeves to catch a roving eye, his exaggerated lapels wide open and revealing; Chanel's schoolgirl bows for the hair; Balenciaga's not-so-schoolgirl bows on the tummy; and Car-din's high draped fronts, incredibly low backs. The essence of each line is the accessory. Buyers brought back bowers of flowers, gardenias and camellias, a cloud of scarves, soft and silken, and many beau-catcher bows.

Jewelry featured piratical earrings, sweet little frosted flowers on stickpins, bibs of beads. Gloves, too, are con-tradictions. The shorter the sleeves the briefer the glove; for longer sleeves the long

For many designers the hat dominates. They've created high Puritanical crowns, exaggerated sailors, intriquing square brims, pouffs of silk and chiffon, bubbles and double bubbles.

Even make-up is double entendre. Elizabeth Arden's new line is "Marked Fragile." It takes two shades of shadow for the eyes, green at the lashes, faint pink on the lids, or dusky cream at lashes, white on the lids.

So, if you can't get to Paris, the next best thing is to visit the May Co. to see "The Best of Paris,"
