

YOUR PROBLEMS
by Ann Landers

'Cary Grant Isn't Waiting for You ...'

Dear Ann Landers: From the beginning of our marriage my husband has been restless, shifting from one job to another. Karl has taken night school courses, correspondence courses and what have you — never finishing anything. I have lost count of the jobs he has had in the last 25 years.

Karl has a pleasing personality and a great many friends, but I resent having had to work from the day we were married. There were times when I carried the total burden because Karl was "between position." This never seemed to bother him.

Our children are grown and on their own now. What I want to know is this: Do you feel I should insist that Karl make a success of something and take care of me as other husbands do — or should I leave him and make a new life for myself? We are now going through one of those periods when I am working and he is not. — OYS-GASH-PILT

Dear Oys: No man ever made a success of something because his wife insisted on it.

Your letter gives me the creeps. No woman is a prize winner who would consider dumping her husband after 25 years because he hasn't been able to make a success in business.

I don't know what you envision as "a new life for yourself" but of this I am sure—Cary Grant isn't waiting for you, Doll.

Dear Ann Landers: I have a close friend who baffles me. I'm never sure of the kind of greeting I will get from her. It ranges from ice cold to hugs and kisses. This has been going on for years.

Sometimes I think she is mad at me for something I said or did and I can't figure out what it could be.

Her reactions are so unpredictable she makes me nervous. Now I dread running into her.

You seem to be the lady with all the answers. Do you have an answer to this one? —FROZEN EMMA

Dear Frozen: I know the type. One day they fall on your neck as if you were a long-lost relative. The next day you get a chill like you (Continued on Page 2)
