YOUR PROBLEMS

by Ann Landers

'Put Him in the Boarding House . . .'

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I have been married for three years. He has two children by a former marriage and I have three. This is where the trouble comes in.

His children are with his wife who has remarried. He has no financial responsibilities to them since their stepdad adopted them legally. My children were with me until my husband began to complain that he didn't see why he should have to put up with another man's kids. To keep peace, I boarded them out. Their father pays support money for them and he is always Johnny-on-the-spot with the check.

I miss my children something awful and feel that I should be making a home for them. This would mean leaving my husband. It's a terrible choice but I am faced with it here and now.

Where do my obligations lie? —MUDDLED

Dear Muddled: What in the world did you and your husband talk about before you married? Did he think you were going to drown your children so he wouldn't be bothered with them?

Get those youngsters out of the boarding home right now and keep them with you. If your husband can't stand them then let HIM go live in the boarding house.

Dear Ann Landers: I am 20 years old and engaged to a boy I have been going with for four years. He has always been truthful and open with me.

Recently he was called to take his physical for the Army. He passed with no trouble. The next day he got to thinking about it and decided to go back to the draft board and tell them about a few things that are wrong with him. He then got his doctor to write a letter to that effect. He was re-examined by the Army doctors and was classified 4-F.

Do you think this could effect our future in any way? Is it possible that his 4-F status will make it difficult for him to get a good job? I somehow feel that what he did was immoral. Help me think this through, please. —SUSAN

Dear Susan: The Army doctors know all the tricks in the book. They would not have reclassified your friend 4-F unless there was a valid reason for doing so. Have faith in him and let him know it. His 4-F status should in (Continued on Page 10)
