Every week thousands of readers who send self-addressed stamped envelopes get personal ad-vice in the mail. I am aware that some kids exaggerate, and others make up stories out of whole cloth, but I always suggest that children talk to a favor-ite teacher or the principal if there is brutality at home. If the story is not true noth-ing has been lost.

Dear Ann Landers: I have a friend (?) who has been pulling a cheap little stunt for years and I am darned sick of it.

Whenever she owes me an invitation she invariably in-vites me for an evening when she knows I've been invited somewhere else.

Invited somewhere else. I'm sure you'll say such clods could hardly be con-sidered friends and they are not worth bothering with. Of course you are right, but please print my letter to let them know they aren't get-ing away with anything. Thank you.—X-RAY EYES EYES Dear Eves: Here is your
