

Area Employment Chief Outlines Service Aims

The many methods of combating unemployment will be highlighted next week at the California State Employment Service office in Torrance, Manager Murray Love disclosed yesterday.

The occasion is the first statewide "Know Your Employment Service Week," June 29-July 3. California State Employment Service offices throughout the state are inviting the public to become acquainted with the many means used to help some 784,000 job seekers. As one example the California State Employment Service makes an average of 15,000 contacts monthly with non-agricultural employers to stimulate job referrals.

Love said the Torrance office placed 10,900 persons last year and made 4,890 non-agricultural employer contacts. "Statewide CSES made more than 784,000 job placements in 1963."

These programs provide: For workers: counseling, testing, and retraining to help ensure use of the worker's highest skill potentials; specialists' help for those unable to compete equally for jobs because of age, race or physical handicap; measures to serve victims of automation, and special help for workers caught in mass lay-offs.

For employers: services designed to reduce turnover and stabilize the work force; labor market information, and frequent employer contacts to appraise them of highly qualified workers to stimulate orders.

For the community: cooperation with economic development groups to improve its economic stature; skill surveys to measure manpower resources, and mobilization of the work force in state and national emergencies.

"Many of these problems are primarily aimed at one group, but indirectly help the others," Love said. Counseling includes vocational guidance for high school seniors in the schools. He said retraining includes the Federal Manpower and Development Training Act, and the State's retraining program, both of which provide cash allowances for enrollees in Department of Employment approved occupations in demand.

... Let's Go

By LARRY MACARAY

In my last column I wrote about Al Lecoque of Paris and his paintings... books and articles have been written about him and I can hardly say enough in just one column... so here's where I left off.

Still haven't heard when his film will be shown on television. The afternoon that we were with him... he received a call that the producer of the film was in an accident... so signing contracts for distribution of the movie was delayed.

I mentioned that our gallery in Anaheim had five Lecoques to show prospective buyers... I want to see them, please hurry because it looks as though one or two may be sold very soon. One doesn't buy an $850 to $2,400 painting like he buys a loaf of bread.

EMILE BERNARD was Lecoque's first teacher at the Julian Art Institute in Paris... beginning in the year 1908. His career developed rapidly and in 1912, at the age of 21, we find him exhibiting his paintings at the International Exposition in London.

4,000 Enter ECC Classes

With more than 4,000 students registering in the two-day enrollment period, El Camino College attracted an increase of 100 students over the 1963 summer session mark, Leo M. Christian, assistant director of student personnel, announced.

Classes, ranging from anthropology to zoology, include 24 in English, 20 in mathematics, and 14 in psychology. A total of 215 classes is listed for the six-week session, in which students are allowed to enroll for a maximum of six units.

A four-week academic program will open Aug. 3 and conclude Aug. 28, with registration scheduled for Friday, July 31, in the Student Activity Building. Former students will enroll from 8:30 to 9:30 a.m. and new students will sign from 10 to 11 a.m.

Approximately 30 classes will be offered, with a maximum program of four units allowed students who are legal residents of El Camino College district or the Los Angeles contract area.

Prospective students must at least be 18 years old or must have graduated from high school. All registrants must comply, Christian emphasizes, with California law regarding poliomyelitis immunization.

Information regarding necessary placement tests is available in the registration office.

FOLLOWING World War I, the artist colony of Paris moved its activities from Montmartre to Montparnasse and Lecoque followed. He established his studio near the chapel of Saint-Germain-des-Près in a Parisian quarter made famous in song.

During this era, Lecoque's favorite motifs were scenes along the Seine, near the city hall and the Hotel de Ville. In 1925 he exhibited in the Andre galleries in Paris... an event that holds fond memories, even today, for Lecoque.

It was from this gallery that many of his best paintings began to find their permanent place in the homes of the literary and influential "big-wigs" on then contemporary France. A catalog from one of Lecoque's early shows has the foreword written by the great French poet, Antain Orliac.

IMPORTANT exhibitions that are a part of Lecoque's records are: the Biennial di Venezia, 1926-1928; Prague, 1926;

REDONDO BEACH — 1401 South Hawthorne

WILMINGTON — 129 Lomita Avenue
