Television Pops, Hams Hold Tests

Local hams report television interference in the Palos Verdes area June 27 and 28 was "in the interest of public safety."

The interference, reported by some residents, was the result of a field day simulated emergency exercise held by the Amateur Radio Relay League throughout the United States, Canada, Mexico, and Hawaii.

Local members of the UARC beamed two-way signals from the water tower site atop the Peninsula for a non-stop 24 hour simulated emergency period. Power for the exercise was supplied by the Fort MacArthur Signal section generators. Six- and two-meter specialists from the UARC manned the stations and maintained contact with other stations during the 24-hours. All amateur radio frequencies were used and hundreds of two-way voice contacts were verified by the Amateur Radio Relay League.

Assisting the hams during the exercise were William Platt, civil defense director for Palos Verdes Estates; Tony Bucci, field day chairman, and Robert R. Leach, coordinator and site chief.

March of Dimes research grantees are following promising leads today in the study of viruses, heredity, psychological tentions, allergies and hypersensitive reactions to determine the cause of arthritis.
