COUNT MARCO SAYS

No Post-Mortem On Parties Now

Are you a party reviewer? There are motion picture reviewers, music reviewers, theater reviewers and others who discuss the performances and evaluate the actions of certain individuals.

Many of these are highly respected in their particular fields, even receiving awards in some instances. But the worst and least respected reviewer of all, the one whose final award is more often a decree of divorce than a trophy, is the party reviewer.

The party reviewer I have in mind is the sort of person who recalls every detail of the night before in all its ghastly truth.

There he sits at the breakfast table, hung over, trying very hard to forget last evening. And there she stands.

If she were at least attractive it could take the sting out of some of her loose-tongued ravings, but as a rule, she doesn't look so hot herself.

Her hair is a mess or in rollers, her eyes are puffed out like adder bags, and that chenille robe should have been thrown away years ago along with those sloppy slippers.

He thinks sadly, "Boy, I have to take it from this."

Can't you forget it? Can't you let him have a good time? After all, the more he unwinds the longer you can plan on having someone to keep you warm at night.

When you come right down to it, it usually isn't his fault anyway that he gets stoned. Most cocktail parties start early, before dinner. What passes for hors d'oeuvres makes him want to drink more. When dinner finally arrives it's too late to save him.

Suddenly he feels the weight of the world, the office and other problems slipping. He's having a great time.

In his wonderful, rosy haze suddenly comes the sting of the bee. She nags, needles, and makes caustic remarks until finally she forces him into wrinking with a vengeance.

Grow up, my dear. Men are different from women. Or didn't you know? If he did make a bit of a fool of himself, you don't have to review it all for him. Once was enough.

Actually, when the truth is known, the only reason you do review it is a sort of scheming blackmail. You figure he'll be so upset and guilty that you can go out and buy that something he told you originally you couldn't have.

The husband who isn't reminded of what a fool he made of himself is the one who all by himself brings home the presents without any reminders from you.

Jehovah's Witnesses Urge Family Worship

Jehovah's Witnesses in Torrance are recommending that families prepare definite plans to make worship a regular function in each household. Presiding ministers in all congregations of Jehovah's Witnesses have announced plans to encourage all families to stress togetherness as a bulwark against delinquency.

Leonard Olliff, minister of the Torrance congregation, said a delegation of 112 members will represent the local congregation at the "Fruitage of the Spirit" assembly to be held in the Long Beach Arena July 16-19.

"Thousands of children of all ages will attend the gatherings," said Olliff. "Assembly sessions are designed for all members of the family who come equipped with Bible, notebook, and songbook," he added.

The Witnesses believe that because of the critical times it is vital for families to do things together, especially when it applies to family worship.

Olliff, commenting on the merit of the lectures for the children, said many people would be surprised to hear the youngsters express themselves. "Most of these children have a detailed and accurate knowledge of Bible subjects," he said, "and are qualified to discuss them."

YWCA Plans Fourth of July Picnic

Torrance families have been invited to celebrate the Fourth of July at the Torrance YWCA. The "Y" will sponsor a family picnic from 4 to 10 p.m. at 2320 W. Carson St.

A special program is planned and there will be games for all members of the family. Each family should bring its own picnic supper. Soft drinks, coffee, cake, and ice cream cones will be available at no charge.

There is no charge for admission and reservations are not required. "Y" officials said the lawn, patio, and auditorium will be used, with dancing planned to follow the entertainment.

Hahn cited this project as an example of roadway improvement work performed by the County Road Department in cooperation with the public for the betterment of our County roadway system.

He noted this portion of Vermont Avenue presently carries a daily average of 9,000 vehicles in the vicinity of the proposed project. "The completed work," he said, "will improve area drainage, increase traffic capacity, lower maintenance costs and generally add to the operational efficiency of this section of County arterial highway."
