

Topless Suits End Guessing

Conservative estimates are that topless bathing suits will be an acceptable mode of dress on the public beaches within four years. It can easily come to pass.

You have only to think back a few years to recall when the brief bikini startled the world and caused an explosion of righteous indignation.

Even in Europe where standards of dress are freer than in this country there were loud objections to the brevity of the bikini. At Cannes and Monte Carlo women who first dared to appear in them were driven forcibly from the beaches by outraged constables.

Today the bikini is as commonplace and acceptable on the beach as sand. Bikini contests have even replaced bathing beauty contests. One formerly sat and studied the figures and faces of the girls vying for various titles as they paraded in bathing suits. Even that has changed today.

At the exclusive Ranch Club in Palm Springs an annual bikini parade is held to select from hundreds of contestants five contenders who can show the most with the least and still cheat the law.

To indicate the way of all flesh, female gender, bikinis have now appeared as de rigueur dress at Los Angeles supermarkets and shopping centers. It is there in that sinkhole of femininity, where I expect the readiest acceptance of the topless bathing suit.

I am constantly asked whether I approve or disapprove of the topless suits. Naturally I disapprove. And for quite a few good reasons.

First, for those unequipped to compete publicly, it is an unfair advantage in the game of man trapping. Should topless suits become acceptable it would seem that the girl who remained modest was trying to hide something she was ashamed of.

As for those of you who are both well-endowed and proud to display your endowment before the eyes of the world, it is a pretty sure bet that you're not trustworthy women. You don't relish secrets or cherish privacy, and mystery is nothing but a bore to you.

Certain men may be intrigued by you before marriage, but after you snare one of that type he either mistrusts you and your intentions around other men or he enforces a cover-up-to-the-neck policy ever after.

Remember this, my dears. Man likes a good mystery. The day when an exposed ankle drove men to madness and the nearest jewelry salon was a wonderful era for women.

That little peep left much to the imagination and kept him panting and wanting to see more. That's as it should be.

With no new worlds to discover man has only one other domain to explore—you. Remove the mystery, excitement and challenge from it and you may end up alone and neglected, with all your secrets bared to no avail.

Harbor Freeway Sections Will Get Fifth Lane

Plans to construct a fifth lane on the Harbor Freeway at critical locations were revealed this week by Supervisor Kenneth Hahn.

Hahn, long critical of conditions which cause traffic back-ups during morning and evening rush hours, said the State Department of Highways had advised him a contract will be awarded soon for the work.

The fifth lane will be built at three locations on the Harbor Freeway. Plans call for the addition to northbound lanes between 23rd Street and Santa Monica Freeway and between 11th Street and Cienega Boulevard.

A third area involves the southbound lanes between the Eighth Street off-ramp and the Olympic Boulevard off-ramp.

Mollett-Ukropina-Marpe Co. of West Covina has submitted the apparent low bid of $268,324. Construction is estimated to require about seven months.

Hahn also said the department's district engineer, E. T. Northrop Gives Inglewood Grant Award of the Inglewood Scholarship at Northrop Institute of Technology to Edward Cernek Jr., has been announced by Ralph D. Bent, director of admissions.

Cernek is the son of Mrs. Edward Cernek of Inglewood. He will enter Northrop in electronic engineering during the fall quarter.

July 10 Set to Honor Space Systems Command

In recognition of the founding of the Air Force Western Development Division, Air Research and Development Command, 10 years ago in Inglewood, Supervisor Kenneth Hahn has proclaimed July 10 as Air Research and Development Day in Los Angeles County.

High-ranking officers of the Air Force will join Gen. Bernard A. Schriever, commander of the Air Force Systems Command, in ceremonies at 10 a.m. at the site where the command was organized, 425 E. Manchester Blvd. Gen. Schriever served as the first commander of the Western Development Division. Maj. Gen. Ben I. Funk is commander of the division, which is known as Space Systems Division.

Volunteers Needed for Oldsters

Volunteer workers for six area convalescent homes for elderly persons are needed by the Volunteer Bureau in San Pedro. Mrs. Tinsy Buckler, who is in charge of the program, says people volunteer to work with youth because they feel the need is so great, but "It was here in Los Angeles County where this nation began its ballistic missile program," noted Supervisor Hahn. "This was the foundation of America's exploration of space, and a triumph of government-industry teamwork within the free enterprise system," he added.

Information about the program is available from Mrs. Buckler at TE 3-5227, or at the Volunteer Bureau, 1427 S. Pacific Ave., San Pedro, any Monday, Wednesday, or Friday from 9 a.m. until noon.
