

El Camino Instructor Writes Book on Senate

An El Camino College history instructor is the co-author of a study of the United States Senate during a progressive period, which will be published in the fall.

Judson A. Grenier, who worked with UCLA history professor George E. Mowry, wrote a lengthy introduction and editorial analysis of the "The Treason of the Senate," a pioneer "muckraking" work by David G. Phillips. The original "Treason" was written in 1906.

In addition to the new introduction and editorial analysis, the two writers also supplied an appendix consisting of capsule biographies of the major senators of the years 1900 to 1906 and a number of quotations from the Congressional Record.

PUBLISHERS of the book plan an October release. The book will be available in paperback during the Spring, 1965.

year preparing to write the book. His research included trips to the Library of Congress and to the libraries at Princeton and Columbia universities to study manuscript sources.

The book examines the criticism of the Senate in the early 1900s, when the State Legislatures appointed Senators, and shows how magazine exposures of corruption stimulated the grassroots movement which led to the adoption of the 17th amendment to the Constitution—providing for the direct election of Senators.

GRENIER BELIEVES that a renewed acquaintance with the problems which the United States has faced and solved in the past may strengthen the ability to recognize sources of corruption today.

An instructor at El Camino since 1956, Grenier resides in Manhattan Beach with his wife and four children.

SEEK CURES

The National Multiple Sclerosis Society was founded in 1946 to combat a disease for which prevention and cure are still unknown. It has chapters, branches and affiliates in 47 states and the District of Columbia, finances research projects nationally and internationally, and operates a program of community patient services, including chapter-supported MS Clinics, clinical programs and centers. It is estimated that 500,000 Americans suffer from MS and related diseases.

RESEARCH FUNDS

The 1964 MS Hope Chest campaign of the National Multiple Sclerosis Society and its chapter seeks to raise funds for research, patient services and professional education.
