YOUR PROBLEMS

by Ann Landers

"Everybody Gets Himself Drunk"

Dear Ann Landers: Some lovely, socially prominent friends of ours are heart-broken. Their daughter is being married in haste because she had the misfortune to go out with a terrible young man who took her to a wild beach party, got her drunk and then had his way with her. The baby is expected in November. The girl is only 17 and the boy is 22.

Will you please say something about older men who ply innocent young girls with liquor and ruin their lives? In my opinion such men should be put in jail. What do you think?—F.L.P.

Dear F. L. P.: I have discussed this subject in the column repeatedly, but my ideas do not square with yours so you've skipped past those columns.

NOBODY gets anybody else drunk. EVERYBODY gets himself drunk — unless of course he is tied up and someone pours the liquor down his throat.

A girl who is so stupid that she would drink herself into a state of senselessness must accept responsibility for whatever happens to her after that.

Dear Ann Landers: I never laughed so hard as when I read what you wrote about school nurses. Let me tell you how it looks from the students' point of view.

If a school nurse ever sent a kid home because he complained about not feeling well you can be sure the kid was more dead than alive—he probably suffered a heart attack. Every student I know who ever went to the school nurse was asked first if he had a test scheduled in the next hour. If the answer was "Yes," the kid was ordered back to class even if he had to be carried on a stretcher.

And then there is aspirin and green soap. School nurses seem to think aspirin and green soap will cure anything from an ingrown toenail to a broken neck.

So please get with it, Ann, and don't tell mothers that the school nurse will send their sick kids home. It won't happen.—B. L.

Dear B.: Too bad the school nurses are on to all the tricks, isn't it? One thing you kids don't dig is this: Every school nurse was
