

Counseling Interviews Begin Here

Counseling interviews which will provide 700 high school students with personal, academic and vocational guidance, got under way at the four Torrance high schools last week. Interviews will be conducted through Aug. 7. The consultations are the outgrowth of a workshop held early in July to prevent high school dropouts. Participating in the workshop were high school psychologists, advisors and counselors who discussed causes of dropout and means of prevention. Robert S. Dollard, guidance consultant, was in charge of the three-day event which featured two visiting psychiatrists, Dr. Rita Rogers, and Dr. Fred Weaver. Parents are invited to participate in the counseling interviews. Students desiring to be interviewed are asked to call their high school. This is the third summer that the Torrance Unified School District has held parent-student conferences.

INTERVIEWS . . . Torrance High sophomore Raymond Hawkes gets some advice from Gerald T. Ronan, a THS counselor (left), while the boy's father, Ray Hawkes, listens carefully. The interview, one of some 700 planned sessions, will provide high school students with personal, academic, or vocational guidance during the summer. The interview program will continue through Aug. 7.
