Community Drama Shop Starting Second Year

This coming Tuesday evening, June 24, the Torrance Drama Workshop will start its second season. The community-type theatre, sponsored by the Torrance Adult Education School, welcomes all those interested from the Torrance area to come to the first meeting which is scheduled at 7 p.m. in room 101 of the Torrance High School.

The instructor, Dan D. Desmond, with 12 years experience in both professional and educational theaters, announced that the first production will be Thornton Wilders' Pulitzer Prize winner "Our Town" followed by another three-act play to be done centrally staged.

"Casting of the plays will begin immediately, therefore it is important for everyone to make the first meeting," stated Desmond.

If you are interested in acting, directing, producing, working back stage, publicity, or any phase of theatre arts—regardless of experience—you should take advantage of this opportunity to spend constructive leisure hours during the summer learning and having fun in a medium that will help build your personality and at the same time give you a chance to make new friends and progress together in the field of entertainment.

Although this is an Adult class, high school students can take the summer class and by fulfilling the requirements receive 5 credits toward graduation.
