The sale will be held at the vacant Beasley store building on the northeast corner of Neece avenue and Highway 101. Neece avenue is one block west of Hawthorne boulevard.

BEAUTY CONTEST

chosen purely on the basis of beauty from among the five finalists who sold the most tickets.

Two Contestants
Miss Ella Mae McLeod and Miss Shirlee Salzman, who participated in last year's Miss Torrance beauty contest, already signed up unofficially for the county fair contest, it was announced.

An invitation has been extended to the Torrance Area Youth Band to handle the whole contest. The band has handled the Miss Torrance Beauty Contest for the last two years.

W. E. Bowen, president of the band, had no comment at this time except to say that the matter is being worked out now and that a decision would be forthcoming within the next week after the committee meets.

Disagreement
Disagreement arose over the fact that the band claimed the rights to the contest because it has handled it for the last few years. The Chamber, on the other hand, claims that it has the original rights over the contest according to its records and that it can reclaim its property.

Further complications arose over the fact that the band had already made plans for its contest at another date and had made arrangements to have Miss Universe here as was the case last year.

The combination beauty-and-popularity contest appeared to be an attempt at a compromise between the traditional Youth Band beauty contest and the usual county fair contest.

MERCANTILE

crease in wages of $2.00 per week each year for the next three years, a cost-of-living adjustment each year, and a three weeks vacation after five years, as a basis of negotiating a three year contract.

The druggists countered with a "no increase" offer on a one-year contract, and the negotiations were terminated.

Scott and Selover agreed that talks should be resumed, and it is expected that meetings will be scheduled during the next few days.

"We have worked out a good contract which will be beneficial to the area," Scott said, "and we are anxious to have negotiations carried to a conclusion which will be helpful to the employers, the union and the community."

RABIES

41 people during this period. A total of 1668 individuals were bitten by dogs within the last 10 years.

Cost
The present method of rabies prevention costs on the average of $2.50 for every person who has been bitten by a dog. There were 379 persons who were bitten in Torrance in 1953. Care of these cases cost a total of $947.50.

This money pays for medical investigators to follow up persons bitten by rabid and suspected rabid animals; mileage; physician's home calls and clinic services; anti-rabies vaccine; laboratory services; nursing services; and general operative expenses. This does not include the cost of private medical care, veterinary care, or the Department of Animal Regulation expenditures, according to the Department of Health.

Such costs would be eliminated through instituting a compulsory anti-rabies vaccination program for dogs because it is not the policy to administer Pasteur treatments and other preventive measures in areas which are protected through a compulsory vaccination program.

Justified Regardless
Regardless of the cost, a compulsory vaccination program is justified if it will spare

GOOD MUSIC

Modern music cannot be condemned on the basis of a comparison with classical works which have existed and been selected from a mass of music many times larger, according to Lukas Foss, current lecturer on the Los Angeles campus of the University of California.

Torrance city councilmen and Mayor Mervin M. Schwab, in statements made to the Torrance Press were favorably inclined toward a compulsory ordinance for Torrance. They said the City Council would "kick the matter around" and study the pros and cons.

Leading residents in the community also expressed favorable opinions about a rabies ordinance in a spot-survey made by the Torrance Press.
