

CUMMING

Theodore E. Cummings, who is now opening the new 35,000 square foot Food Giant market at 423 S. Hawthorne boulevard in Hawthorne. The rapid pace set in the retail food field by Cummings can be measured by the fact that the new Food Giant is his 22nd "Grand Opening."

Owner and Operator

Local citizens recognize Cummings as the owner and operator of Market Town Markets in Hawthorne and Gardena for the past seven years. Cummings Markets Inc., of which Theodore Cummings is president, has recently sold Market Town, Gardena and has remodeled and rebuilt the Hawthorne store to the present Food Giant. This move is in line with the corporation's policy of operating only super-markets where large volume can be responsible for lowest prices to the customers.

New Theory

Cummings' early observations in retailing were the basis for his marketing theories, which now place him among the world's foremost merchants. Cummings believes and has proved his philosophy, that speed in food handling and convenient facilities result in high volume and therefore, in low prices. Many years ago Cummings established a new and rapid system of "checking", and while he himself was known to be one of the fastest checkers in the business, his contributions have been of great benefit to the food industry as a whole.

While the supermarket industry generally concedes that Cummings is one of the most aggressive advertisers in the field, Cummings himself declares that he feels his most valuable contribution to his profession is his "volume-buying-volume-selling" theory. Long an advocate of buying merchandise direct from the manufacturer to eliminate intermediate costs, he is also the advocate of huge and complete stocks, of giant displays, of wide varieties of nationally advertised goods, of wider aisles for the conservation of both shoppers' and employees' time.

Credit

Cummings' career might, to the casual observer, be indicative of an exceedingly ambitious, aggressive and tireless worker. These elements are no doubt to some degree responsible for his success, but Cummings gives chief credit to the men and women who have been associated with him in his enterprises since the beginning. Cummings is especially proud of the fact that many of his employees have been in his organization for fifteen years. While Cummings is certainly a believer in quick turnover in merchandise, his belief in employee relations is just the opposite. The Food Giant employees are mostly old friends of thousands of shoppers who have patronized Cummings Markets. Cummings is married and the father of two daughters. In spite of his heavy schedule of duties as president of Cummings Markets Inc., he is active in civic and philanthropic affairs.

with this project they'll probably include all of it."

Measures

The city is still awaiting word as to the specific safety measures which will be taken. Cancellation calls for center islands and left-hand turn-off lanes. Whether the Pacific Coast Highway project also calls for the installation of traffic signals is not known as yet, the city manager stated.

The city has fought for these safety measures over a period of five years, with a number of city officials making special trips to Sacramento to gain support for this project.
