New Tubeless Tire Available At Firestone

A new tubeless tire that uses the highest tensile-strength nylon yet developed and race tire construction principles now can be obtained by motorists from Jim Bird, manager of the local Firestone store 1454 Marcellina.

"Named after the race where it was developed, the Firestone all-nylon '500' tire is stronger and lighter in weight than any other tire made," according to Bird.

"It will run cooler, will wear longer, and will provide a greater safety margin under high-speed and hot weather driving conditions," he said.

It is the third of the tubeless passenger car tire lines which Firestone has introduced.

The tire is of low-pressure, super-bolloon construction. Instead of an inner tube, it has a patented safety-liner bonded to the inside of the tire.

This liner, with its high air retaining characteristics, protects against punctures by clinging to penetrating nails or other sharp objects to prevent loss of air.
