City Becomes Relief Center During 'Raid'

Torrance acted as a medical and evacuation center in Monday's mock bombardment of the United States by 400 conventional and atomic 'enemy' bombers. Two 'atomic bombs' dropped in this general area 'struck' at Central avenue and 5th street in Los Angeles at 10:15 a.m. and at Atlantic boulevard and Anaheim avenue in Long Beach.

Centers

Torrance was called upon to set up eight medical centers and two evacuation centers during 'operation alert,' according to George Powell, assistant director of civil defense.

The Torrance control center was called into action at 6 p.m. Monday's civil defense test was different from the one held recently in that there was no previous briefing of the various centers on the problems which they would be called upon to handle. Monday's drill was kept completely spontaneous.

Weak and Strong Points

Torrance's civil defense weak-point, Powell said, is the lack of a permanent control center from which to work. He hopes that such a center could be installed in the new fire station or the proposed new civic center.

One of the major accomplishments of this drill was the setting up of a master file for all civil defense information coming in from the various service chiefs.

TORRANCE MOUNTIES TO RIDE

Final plans were made by the Torrance Mounted Police for the parade at Huntington Beach, July 5, at the group's monthly meeting last week.

The troop also voted to invite the official city family to this colorful public affair.

Commended for expert horsemanship under duress at the Costa Mesa parade was Chadwick Wright. The Torrance colors led the parade and the Torrance troop carried home a trophy.

Ted Schroeder and Charley Gots were accepted into the troop.

Mrs. Mary B. Smith, of 25011 Frampton, Harbor City, spends three full days a week sewing and making bed pads, scuffles, and other items for the Veteran's Hospital at Sawtelle. She has been doing this work for the past twelve years.
