Fashion Notes

By MARY BARRETT, Women's Editor

Last week we gave a few fashion hints to the Thanksgiving hostess. To those lucky ones being invited out to dinner this week, or at any time for that matter, the choice of attire is varied, and is based of course, on the degree of formality to be stressed for the particular occasion.

Family Dinners
For the many family gatherings, street or afternoon wear that is comfortable and good looking is customary for the afternoon dinner. Of course, it may be a case of "showing dear aunt Bessie that hubby's star is rising..." in which event I would suggest the best QUALITY garments you own, not the most elegant.

On the other hand, if you expect to have to wrestle with a small tot, or there is danger of little Johnny's Thanksgiving meal being spilled on you, choose a becoming but festive frock, perhaps a jacketed sheath, of an elegant but washable cotton.

The degree of formality at a dinner party with friends depends upon the hour, the number of guests invited, the setting and usual mode of entertaining employed by the hostess. The little day-length dinner dress is usually always a safe bet, unless it has been specified or you are sure that it is to be a black-tie affair.

Dining Out
If you are being escorted by your best beau to afternoon dinner in town, with dancing afterwards, perhaps, the best choice would be one of the little cocktail suits or dresses... a little sheer wool sheath and jacket trimmed with satin... a smart dark-toned suit-dress of brocade or taffeta... the full-skirted princess dress of wool jersey or flannel with jewel or fur touches, are a few of the shining stars for the cafe scene.

Hackbush Home Scene Of Family Reunion

Thanksgiving will be celebrated by a family reunion... the first in ten years, by Charles and Helen Hackbush in their home at 4520 Pacific Coast Highway, Ellinwood, when they host Mr. Hackbush's sister Mrs. Mary J. Stricker and her son, Ronald, 14.

Mrs. Stricker and Donald recently moved to Torrance from Wichita Falls, Texas, where she was active in Red Cross. Donald attends Torrance High, where he plays basketball, and his mother plans to take up Red Cross work locally in the near future.

Also enjoying the holiday together were the three Hackbush children, Charlene, 12; Marylyn, 10; and Peter, who is 5.
