the PE company's safe.

Bum Job

McCorkhill thereupon tried to enter the office through a skylight, proving himself quite inexperienced at the game, according to Sgt. Bennett. He had to try three different skylights before finally gaining entry.

McCorkhill then opened a back window by which Nelson entered.

The two rifled the desk drawers, making off with five envelopes containing five checks totaling $2888.86.

Hot Stuff

Upon arriving home, the two discovered to their consternation that the checks were made payable to Pacific Electric and consequently were too hot to handle, according to Det. Sgt. Bennett.

So, in all fairness, the men decided to take the checks back Tuesday morning. While not exactly returning them where they had found them, in the drawers, they did leave them next to the incinerator.

Arrest followed swiftly at their homes upon a tip received by Sgt. Bennett. Both men admitted the burglaries.

protection to the area and how much revenue the city would collect from the area to pay for these services.

Objections

Some of the murmurings of Torrance's councilmen were directed at the fact that the developers intend to build tract homes up here, and that Torrance has enough of them already.

The developers have not approached the Torrance Board of Education yet to see how they feel about the matter. The area would contain about 3500 homes and 12,000 people, Stevens estimated.
