Hearings Close On Underpass

Public hearings before the California Public Utilities Commission were concluded today on the application of the State Department of Public Works for authority to rebuild and widen the El Nido underpass of the Santa Fe Railway at Hawthorne avenue in the Redondo Beach-Torrance area.
 Examiner Grant E. Sypfers announced the case would be submitted with the filing of briefs within 60 days. He said he would recommend that the commission hear final arguments sitting en banc.
 Cost of the proposed improvement is estimated, at approximately $150,000. The Department of Public Works asked the commission to apportion the cost between the state and the railroad on a 50-50 basis.
 During the hearings engineers of the Division of Highways testified that the improvement is necessary because of the widening of Hawthorne avenue, a state highway, on either side of the present structure. The existing underpass, which accommodates only two traffic lanes, was constructed by the railroad in 1926.

A BRAND OF GRACIOUS SUBURBAN LIVING

Jose Dolores Sepulveda, first occupant of the place known as Palos Verdes, little dreamed that his abundant Rancho would some day become "home" for many Californians. But today in historic Rancho Palos Verdes . . . several thousand acres of sunny, rolling hills, swept by clean breezes from the sparkling blue Pacific . . . are being changed into a planned community of homes. Here is the most favored Rancho of the Dons, all that is fine in California living is being created . . . homesites offering ample room for fun, modern schools, smart shopping areas, beautiful churches, glorious recreation facilities.
 Thus this romantic old brand, which most fittingly combines the warm, hospitable symbols of the heart and the cup, takes on new meaning in California history. Here truly is a brand of gracious suburban living . . . Rancho Palos Verdes . . . where you can make the home of your dreams a reality.
