Adventists Make Plans For Camp

The church's concern for its youth was emphasized last week-end by members of the Torrance Seventh-day Adventist church, 1610 Acacia avenue.

On Sunday, May 20, a group of persons from the local church traveled to Cedar Falls camp in the San Bernardino mountains where they helped construct new cabins to be used by church youth this summer.

"We know that our youth is the church's most valuable asset," Pastor Glenn L. Goffar said in commenting on the week-end activity.

"The help that we give our youth in better camp facilities and in their programs geared to their particular problems is directly proportional to the number of youth that the church will claim as they grow into adulthood," he stated.

Pastor Goffar said that youth from the Torrance Adventist church will have the opportunity of attending five summer camp periods at the mountain youth center this summer.
