It's Weird. It's Colorful, It's Delightful; It's Chapel Theatre's 'Dark Of The Moon'

First-niters during the intermission of the current Chapel Theatre production, "Dark of the Moon" were already making reservations to come again. If this is any indication of the calibre of the performance, then theatre-goers will have to hustle if they expect to catch one of the remaining shows.

"Dark of the Moon" is more than a treat, it is a masterpiece of acting, dancing and poetry artfully put together by director Don Gish. A written description can only brush the surface of everything that happens on that tiny stage.

Music And Fantasy
There is ballet, ballad singing, square dancing, revivals, weird sound effects and poetry in its most beautiful form. The gamut of theatre techniques are used - and used masterfully. Especially effective is the organ music of Eloise Brown and guitar music of Ray Goodwin. They give depth and emphasis to the eerie and emotional scenes on top of the witch's mountain and inside the cabin.

Paul Shelley, actor, singer, dancer, director and playwright, from Torrance, puts his many talents to best advantage as he plays the lead of the witch boy. In the legend, he becomes human in order to marry pretty Barbara Allen, played by Jane Burns. Even when Paul comes "off the mountain" his witch-like qualities are never lost, only skillfully hidden.

Jane Burns, who has sung professionally with Ralph Flanagan's orchestra, does a magnificent job throughout. The sweetness of "Barbery" Allen is there as she professes her love for the witch boy, but her ability as an actress to show emotion packed with pride comes to a hysterical climax during the rival.

Witches Dance
The choreography, composed by Ridge Walker and H. Sterling Wright, is, in itself, well worth the price of admission. Walker, Charline French and Barbara Joyce are delightful and at the same time bewitchingly sinister as they tempt and torment the witch boy. Walker just finished "Dark of the Moon" for summer stock in the East.

Gladys Manu, versatile and talented actress, gives a deft performance as the backwoods, unkempt mother, Mrs. Allen. She is so convincing that it is hard to believe she was the very sophisticated professor's wife in "Tea and Symphy." She and her tobacco-chewing husband on stage, Bunny Walls, will long be remembered for their 'natural' interpretation of folk life.

For those of you who like to "get (pronounced "git") into the spirit of things," this show offers a chance to not only enter mentally but physically into the action. During the keyed-up rival, the audience is asked to join in the singing of such tunes as "Lonesome Valley."

LET US express thanksgiving to the Father for His living-kindness to all His children, putting aside the false assumption that there has been any special providence watching over us and not over others. That is the better thanksgiving.—The Rev. Dr. Willis Goldsmith.
