Glamorous New York!

Exclusive to you: backstage glimpse of glamour personified! We all read "Vogue" magazine, if not hot from the news stand, then in the beauty parlor under the drier. And a picture leaps to mind of the gals connected with it . . . lovely ladies leaning over languidly polished desks. Gay sophisticated chatter, sumptous clothes, cocktails whirling!

Sorry, folks . . . It just isn't so ! The lovely ladies are there . . . many of them! But their clothes are workaday shirts, or sweaters, and skirts, or comfortably cut woolens. Desks are battered and scarred . . . cocktails conspicously absent.

Beautiful clothes there are, and shoes and accessories, and cosmetics! in closets, on shelves, on desks and chairs. Waiting silently for the hours and hours of knowing inspection and selection before they are approved as worthy of photography for your

What's the idea or philosophy behind such a magazine? Answer Mary Roblee, vivacious, honey blonde, young and head of the features dept. (responsible for finding and publishing some of the finest contemporary poetry and prose) "Basic good taste in everything . . . fashion, living, theatre, the arts! We try never to be banal here . . . but it isn't just what's new that counts . . . It's what's basically good !"

Thinking of fashion, or fashion writing as a career? I asked Effie Varrone, also young, dark haired, soft spoken personnel manager what's the best background or training for a career on a magazine such as "Vogue."

The answer, simple and sincere: "Our prix de paris contest for college girls is our major way of finding editorial talent. But aside from that . . . learn shorthand and typing ! They're the key to open the door. You can get close to the creative side of things working for an Editor . . . whether it be the Art, Feature, Editorial, or Foreign departments, while using your mechanical skills as a secretary. And we have a definite policy of promotion from within whenever possible!

Are there men working on this woman's magazine? Yes! Alex Lieberman, art director has the most masculine, (almost black toned) office I've ever seen! Could be in lonely self defense, although we glimpsed other men perspiring cheerfully over the setting up of an issue you'll see four months from Like beautiful women everywhere, "Vogue" works hard for its public good looks. But it's as worth it for them as it is for us!

MAUDE'S MUSINGS

Fifth Avenue, always visually exciting, is dressed up fit or a Queen! The Plaza fountain is freshly scrubbed, like a little boy waiting for "Company." Light standards and trash baskets are painted gold (done originally for the Avenue's 50th Anniversary, but still so royal looking!) Store windows encase fairy tale ball gowns of brocades, and satins and laces; and jewels worth a Queen's ransom.

Long boxes of brilliant chrysanthemums and asters, and posts with banners flying line the curbs! The whole place is spruced up to say, "Welcome Neighbor!" to a young couple from across the sea . . . Elizabeth and Philip

May all the world be this neighborly . . . always!
