King Reelected to House by Pace-Setting Margin

Congressman Cecil R. King yesterday was hailed as the Congressman receiving the greatest plurality in the entire United States in the November election.

The veteran legislator who won re-election to his ninth term in the House of Representatives by a margin of 121,217 votes, topped all the rest of the 436 congressmen elected, according to complete semi-official tabulations.

Speaker of the House of Representatives Sam Rayburn, in personally congratulating Congressman King for his record-breaking win, pointed out that his sweeping plurality included out-polling even Congressmen elected-at-large, who are voted on by their entire state.

"You are to be congratulated, not only for a great victory," Rayburn told King, "but the margin by which you won re-election proves that your outstanding record in Congress for these many years has been recognized and appreciated by the people of your District that you have so ably served."

The final tabulation in the 17th District, including absentee ballots, shows that Congressman King received 181,210 votes to 59,993 for his opponent, Leonard DiMiceli.
