A Hungarian freedom fighter is being held by immigration authorities after allegedly passing a bad check in a Torrance service station.

Detectives said that Steven Jani, 35, a Canadian resident now, is also wanted for check passing by Holl wood investigators.

Officers said that the sales engineer reportedly ran up telephone bills of several thousand dollars making calls to Budapest.

He is now being held in Spokane, Wash.

'Moonlight Law' Goes to Council

An ordinance which limits "moonlighting" to 16 hours per week for city employees will be introduced at Tuesday's City Council meeting.

While the law actually liberalizes the present law which bans outside work for city personnel altogether, it is more restrictive than the past policy of not enforcing the work ban.

Councilmen finally decided on a compromise measure under which employees can work for limited periods after receiving permission from their superiors.

Appoint Officials for Auto Run

A 12-man technical committee, under Officer Ira W. McKay of the San Marino police department, will handle details of the sixth annual Youth Safety Run, June 21-23, from Torrance to Yosemite and return.

INDIAN HEAD BUTTON, valued at $25, is one of the prizes of Mrs. Clifford Mather's button collection. Here she displays it along with a few of the others which are part of her hobby.

Button Collecting Not Easy in California

California may boast of lots of attractions from sunny weather to busy beaches, but as far as buttons go, it's pretty dull.

At least that is how Mrs. Clifford Mather of 823 Cota Ave. has found it.

Mrs. Mather, who has a collection of buttons ranging from historical and mythological ones to the flashy buttons of the gay flapper period, finds adding to her collection a real problem.

"People just didn't save their buttons out here," she states. "Back in Massachusetts everyone used to have a button jar or box stored away in the attic."

Though somewhat stymied in her collecting, Mrs. Mather still is enthusiastic about her hobby.

"Studying buttons takes in history, mythology and costume," says Mrs. Mather, who confesses she just doesn't have the room to really get around to classifying all she already has.

Some of the glittering buttons of by-gone days would make terrific costume jewelry, but Mrs. Mather isn't tempted.

"I would rather keep them all together," she states. "We are a collecting family I guess. My husband has coins, my son is interested in stamps and I collect dolls, too."

The buttons are a fairly recent addition to the California branch of the family. They all formerly belonged to her mother-in-law, who began the hobby 20 years ago on the East Coast.

Mrs. Mather belongs to the Long Beach Button Club and has entered several shows.

Both she and her husband enjoy the club's get-togethers at member's homes. "We usually have lunch, a guest speaker and then spend the afternoon rooting through each other's collections of buttons."

With all the buttons around household furniture is always needed. Sell your "don't want's" with a Torrance Press Want Ad. Call FA 8-2445.

the house, Mrs. Mather admits that sewing one on her husband's shirt is still a problem. "I never have one to match," she says.

No Signs Posted, Horse Can't Read

Request for the posting of four equestrian signs on Anza Ave. between Del Amo and Torrance Blvds. was turned down by the City Council.

The councilmen balked at the $100 cost after hearing Councilman Willys Blount ask: "How many horses can read?"

Councilman Robert Jahn wanted to know, "If the signs are smaller than the horses, how can people who don't see the horses see the signs?"
