

Tougher Steel Predicted Here by Spokesman

Strengthening of steel beyond present upper limit of 300,000 pounds per square inch is predicted by W. R. Patterson, general superintendent of the steel departments of the Torrance plant of The National Supply Company. Patterson says "there is reason, based on sound metallurgical theory, to believe that the figure could be much higher, and man is certainly going to encounter a situation, if we are not already faced with it, where higher strength in the material is vital to some need."
