

Colleagues Nix Jahn Tract Map

Being a councilman was no help to Robert Jahn when a subdivision he intends to build was held up by his colleagues. The other councilmen refused to approve the final tract map for the 26-home development because it shows that drainage will flow to Arlington Ave. and 231st St. "I wouldn't vote for this, or anything like this," snorted Councilman George Bradford. "This will drain on an already low spot on Arlington."

Although Wade E. Peebles, director public works, said that the intersection is the original low spot for the area, the other council members asked that the map be held up pending an engineering study. "The increased water will cause a terrible problem. The school children can't get through," observed License Inspector Gale Whitacre, an area resident.

Jahn, who absented himself during the discussion of the matter, made no comment after he learned the matter had been referred to the engineering department.
