Clerics Say Plan to Probe Council Distorted, Hint They'll Stay Away

The Torrance Ministerial Association, unnerved over publication of its plan to investigate the decorum of the City Council, Tuesday night claimed the purpose of its three-man committee was misinterpreted. It invited the council to breakfast.

The group made the declaration in a letter to the council, inviting the city fathers to breakfast. It did not state how the purpose was distorted nor further explain its project.

Three questions were put to the council in the letter:

Is it your desire for ministers to continue to open council meetings with prayer?

Would the presence of a minister throughout the meeting be of value . . . ?

If the council members desire the continuation of the presence of clergymen to invoke divine guidance . . . can steps be taken to guard more carefully against undignified and unrestrained verbal statements which have lowered the prestige of our city government in the eyes of many people?

Mayor Isen jumped ahead of the agenda to tell the Rev. Gerald Garlid, who had recited the invocation, that the council is able to keep its own house in order. He said he wished the ministers would stay, if nothing more than to hear the burden of a packed agenda and its attendant difficulties.

No move was made to encourage the clergy in its campaign, perhaps because the charge of misinterpretation left the council no hint of what the group proposes.

The council finally filed the letter and its questions, leaving it up to individual members to decide whether or not they wish to breakfast with the clergy at the appointed time: Nov. 20 at 7:30 a.m.
