School Head Hull Refuses Answer

3. Scientific knowledge in various educational fields, as proven by experience and research. To some things, there is no set answer; the educator must be "both a scientist and an artist."

Broad Policies
The board of education hires the superintendent to administer the program, he said. It sets the board policies within which a school district operates, after hearing the best information that the superintendent and his staff can provide.

The Torrance board tries to spend its time planning an education program, not "fighting and arguing," Hull said.

"It is hard to have a good program where the board is always doing this," he noted. "One reason Torrance board doesn't is that it isn't forced to make lots of surprise decisions. Important decisions may be discussed for weeks and months before final action is taken."

Citizens to Probe School System

thing must be done. There's a serious question as to whether our children are receiving an adequate education. Then, again, too many good teachers are leaving the system.

"Why?"
This question his group wishes answered, Carreiro declared.

Want Friendly Council
The Young Democrats reportedly were reluctant to introduce politics into the situation but felt the need for a sympathetic City Council over-ride their reluctance. The group hopes for a City Council which will "put its prestige and facilities at the disposal of the citizen's committee, which committee would represent qualified and respected citizens from all areas of the city."

The youthful Carreiro, himself in the last year of study for a teaching credential, said that criticisms leveled at the Torrance school system either are valid or represent a failure of school officials to inform the people and maintain proper communication with school personnel and the public.

In a declaration of policy, the Young Democrat leader issued this statement:

"No institution is above valid criticism. A mature and responsible citizen's committee, such as we envision, will not attempt to discredit our school system but rather, will make whatever criticisms that might be found necessary . . . conducive to academic growth and expression of the will of Torrance parents and leaders."
