Navy Gives Ryan Huge Pact

A contract for $5,914,000 has been awarded to Ryan Electronics, division of Ryan Aeronautical Company, by the Bureau of Naval Weapons, Washington, D.C. The contract covers initial procurement of radar navigation sets, spares, support equipment, and engineering support items. The Ryan navigation sets will be supplied for use in the navy's latest rotary wing antisubmarine aircraft, including Sikorsky HSS-2 amphibious helicopters and Ka-50 HU2K-1 type helicopters. Deliveries are scheduled to start in April and continue until September, 1961. The set is an advanced ground-velocity indicator that enables helicopters automatically to achieve and maintain sustained precision hovering under all weather conditions—essential to the use of sonar techniques for detection of submarines. Engineering will be done at the Ryan Electronics Engineering research center at Kearny Mesa, San Diego, and production will be accomplished at the division's manufacturing plant in El Camino College students will join others in the Southland for Bank of America's junior-college business awards, under which 120 students will receive checks for $100 each.

Junior College Students Will Vie for Awards

Faculty committees in 60 junior colleges are now judging the records of candidates and will announce the winners soon. Thirty colleges of the Southern California Junior College Association are participating. Chairman of the committee of college presidents on the awards is Dr. John Given, president of Los Angeles Metropolitan College of Business. Two winners will be picked from each school—one majoring in business administration or banking, the other in secretarial or clerical studies. They will be judged on scholarship, business personality, and participation in additional school activities or outside employment. Jesse W. Tapp, chairman of Bank of America's board of directors, will present checks to winners May 6, when the bank honors them with a banquet at Beverly Hilton.
