LOOKING 'EM OVER"

Talking With Kasten

Managers of big-league baseball outfits generally have it tough. During spring training they must decide, in six weeks, who's to play after watching their material go through the vigors of pre-season play. Yet, mentors of the pros have it easy in another respect—their prospects are not raw.

However, in high school baseball, coaches have this element to contend with. The diamond head - man gets nothing but green material to work with. He must teach the boys, just beginning to work themselves loose from awkwardness, the fundamentals of the national pastime. It is here, at prep level, that a youngster liscovers whether he's got the stuff to make the big-time.

At Torrance High, successful Lusien grid coach Irwin Kasten doubles as baseball mentor. We located the affable, easy-going man who directs the destiny of Torrance's baseball team at practice earlier in the week. After discussing the Dodgers we got down to a strictly question and answer session.

As for racing, pigeon racing, golfing, hurlers I have three full timers and one part-timer, Tom Richardson, Aldoph Duran and Roy Wilson as main stays and Ybarra can also throw.

Have you got a fast ball pitcher?

None of my boys are fast. But they have control. Unusual for this grade of ball I admit. My starters have an assortment of stuff. Duran is the righthander and Wilson and Richardson pitch from the left.

Have you got a .300 hitter on the squad?

I really don't know this early in the season but Jim Armstrong made all-league last year and fielded his position with skill.

How does he look this year?

Good. No reason why he shouldn't repeat his performance.
