Civic Symphony Delights Audience With Concert Version of 'Faust'

By VERA ARVEY

Under direction of Elyse Aehle, the Torrance South Bay Civic Symphony provided a rewarding Sunday afternoon for scores of music lovers at Redondo High School when Gounod's "Faust" was presented in concert form.

Sharing the program were several gifted singers, in addition to orchestral and choral musicians, who performed with precision and care.

Joan Trona took the part of Margarita with absolute vocal command.

Joseph Rehard, whose voice is light and appealing, rose to great heights as Faust.

Lyle Heck as Mephistopheles had just the right sardonic touch, while Winifred Mewborn's "Flower Song" provided a moment of great enjoyment.

A unique method of co-ordinating and explaining the drama was employed by a narrator to fill gaps in the story. David Bond enacted this role.

The entire stage picture was attractive, with the black and white clothing of the conductor, orchestra members, and North American Chorus members.

The vocal soloists, colorfully costumed, enhanced their singing by a few bits of action which were restrained and in good taste.

The finale, in which the voices of the tenor and soprano blended with the orchestra, held the attention of the audience completely.

A tribute was paid to the conductor and orchestra by Mrs. A. Atherton Irish, former resident of the South Bay area and former manager of the Hollywood Bowl.

Manufacturing industries employed 778,000 wage and salary workers in the Los Angeles-Long Beach Metropolitan Area in February. This was 27,400, or 4%, above February 1959.
