

"LOOKING 'EM OVER"

With Mike Callos Jr.

Tough Trip

Coming back from a road trip, an unsuccessful one, is tough. But even tougher is Walt Alston's task. That of facing the powerful San Francisco Giants here at home in the first of a very important three-game series tonight.

In Frisco, St. Louis, and Chicago, the Dodgers and Alston discovered that some of their hitters were coming to life but that the secondary battery of pitchers were not half as good as starters Drysdale, Sherry, and Podres.

The boys flew in last night from that disastrous short junket to the mid-west. Looking, disgusted, and forlorn were Sandy Koufax, who couldn't get a man out in St. Louis; Stan "Not the Man" Williams, suffering from control problems; little Danny MacDevitt trying to hide behind big Tommy Davis and a pondering Clem Labine, who wonders if this is his last year as a Dodger reliever.

Now with a night's rest this dejected crew is asked to meet the likes of Willie Mays, Orlando Cepeda, Willie McCovey and the murderous other Giants.

Little Different Up North

When the Dodgers left the Coliseum for their first trip away from home they were an extremely confident bunch. They had taken one of two from Chicago and swept the series with the Red Birds.

After Johnny Podres mowed the "Jints" with a superb 4-0 victory, in came Drysdale to lose a heart-breaker 1-0 to youngster Mike McCormick. The Dodgers left Frisco still looking the part of World Champions. But, oh my, they sure got clobbered elsewhere. You know the stories.

Of course, the local experts are saying that the Dodgers started late last year after a miserable start. They point with pride to Walt Alston and his remarkable decisions. They are saying that Walter will come through again. But what they are neglecting to say is that Smokey's know-how was based on luck. The kind that wins you many dollars in Las Vegas whenever that "intangible something" comes to you.

More Than Chance

Even after the pennant was won in '59 Alston was the first to say that lots of luck went into the winning of it. The skipper also said that "team spirit" contributed much to the victory.

Whatever it was one thing is sure—it takes more than chance to capture a pennant, National League style. Besides the ingredients Alston used, reasons like pitchers throwing better than they have all year and hitters getting that one crucial hit, were contributing factors.

Beginning with the game tonight Smokey must be thinking of the things to put in his kettle to perk up the ailing Dodgers. In '59 Frisco and Milwaukee were the contenders. This year Alston's got to watch Pittsburgh and Cincinnati as well.

You can bet that Alston will use everything in the bullpen and dug-out to win this series with the Giants. None of that leaving a pitcher in too long nor a hitter who can't direct the ball past the infield.

After Mays and Co. leave our version of a ballpark, the Champs will host the Reds and Braves. Most of these games must be won. No point in getting too far behind, the contenders might not weaken in the stretch.

Markel After Ascot Victory

A field worthy of a National Championship race will answer Starter Markel's flag for Friday evening's AMA motorcycle race meet at Ascot Stadium.

The first event on the 12-race card is set for 8:30. Qualifying starts at 7.

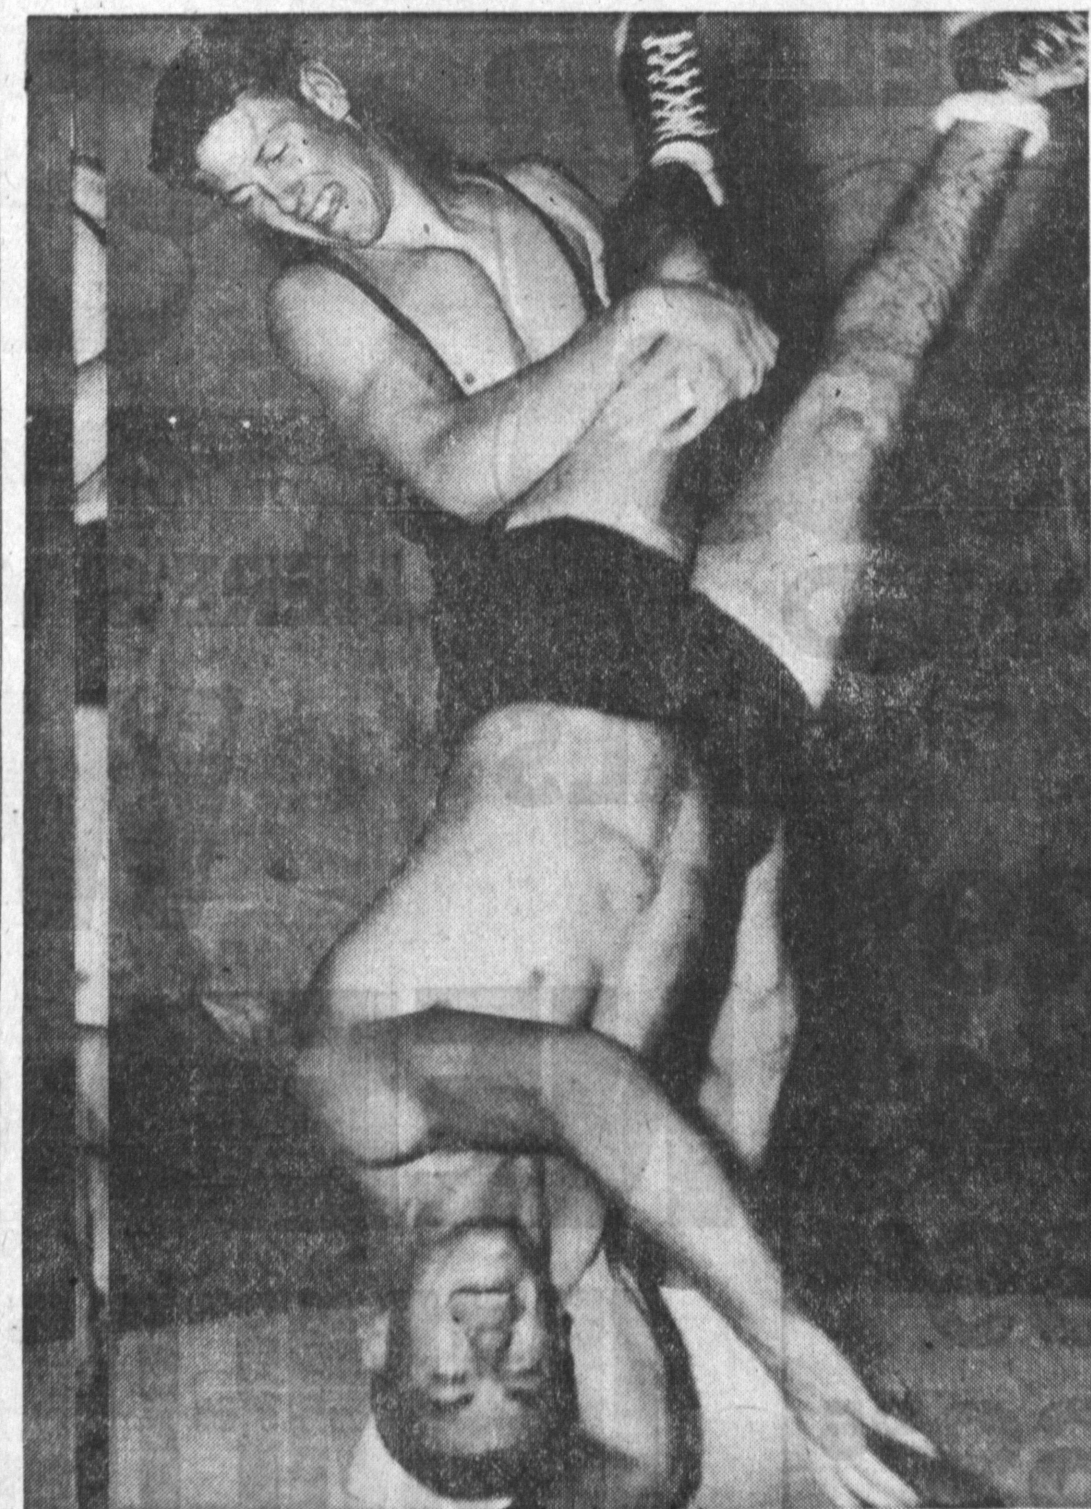

Red-hot Michigan star Bart Markel will be after another main event victory. Markel has stormed into town and taken over like he owned the oval at the 182nd and Vermont Avenue. His tactics of riding high near the fence adds to his spectacular color.

A big segment of the nation's top riding talent—including Al Gunter, Don Hawley, Dick Dorrestyn, Joe Leonard, Dick Mann, Troy Lee, Johnny Gibson and Dick Terhune—will be out to hold the flying Markel.

There's a chance Sammy (The Flying Flea) Tanner also will be physically able to ride. Tanner has been nursing an injured foot suffered in a spectacular spill three weeks ago.

Preston Petty and Elliott Schultz figure to dominate the Class B competition, but the question is in which order.

Buckalew To Iowa Today

El Camino College's greatest wrestling achievement in the 14-year history of the college will be realized when two Warrior students travel to Ames, Iowa, to participate in the Olympic final tryouts today.

Stuart Buckalew, 147½-pound champion of the Southern Pacific Amateur Athletic Union Tournament and Jun Watanabe, 114½-pound champion of the Naval Training Center AAU Tournament and runner-up in the SPAAU Tournament at Long Beach, will carry the college's hopes for participation in the Olympic finals in Rome, Italy, for the United States.

Buckalew is sponsored by the Torrance Chamber of Commerce and Watanabe is sponsored by the Compton Judo Club and the Leuzinger High School Alumni Association.

Watanabe, in his first year of Olympic wrestling, has never been defeated in the Olympic Style, winning seven and tying three matches.

In bouts with Claude Williams, champion of the SPAAU Tournament, Watanabe has won and tied.

Buckalew, also in his first year of Olympic wrestling, bowed in his first two matches in the San Diego Naval Training Center Tournament in February. In one, however, he dropped a disputed 3-2 decision to Mario To-var, six-time Mexican AAU Champion and three-time Olympic Games competitor. He has sparkled, however despite the novelty of the grappling style to him.

GOING TO BAT.—El Camino College first sacker Stan Beard remains a potent threat to rival hurlers in his sophomore year with the Warriors. He clouted .380 in earning Bay League laurels in 1959.

ECC Takes On Bakersfield

Gusty winds swept through the Southland over the weekend when El Camino saw its baseball chances blow out the window. On Friday, however, the Warriors will try to get back on the winning trail when they travel to Bakersfield.

In two earlier encounters with the Renegades, the Braves have emerged victorious, but the way the locals have been kicking the horsehide around during the last week anything can happen.

Valley, under the direction of Coach Charlie Mann and behind the pitching of Floyd Meyer, saddled the tribe with an 8-2 loss on the Monarch diamond Friday.

Sloppy fielding, ineffective hurling and a lack of heads up ball cost the Indians the ball game.
