Governor's Wife Feted

"I don't make speeches," said Mrs. Edmund Brown, California's first lady, "One in the family is enough. Any way people just want to see what you look like, they don't expect any pearls of wisdom."

Thus Mrs. Brown introduced her informal talk Thursday on highlights of life in the governor's mansion, given at luncheon in her honor by democrat women of the area.

"My mail is one of the most interesting aspects of the day," she said I have had requests for everything from one of my old hats to one of the governor's used shirts.

"Which hat to send bothered me," she recalled. "If it was one I liked I wanted to keep it. If I didn't like it, I could imagine people saying 'imagine the governor's wife wearing an old hat like that.'"

Mrs. Brown also told of a letter she received from a 13-year-old girl asking what she considered the duties and responsibilities of a teen-ager and one from a sixth-grade boy requesting all the information on the state of California.

Among the problems of being first lady, Mrs. Brown quoted overeating as being top on the list.

"It's just impossible," she said, "when one is invited to so many delicious breakfasts, lunches, and dinners not to get in the bad graces of one's scales."

The event was held at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Frank E. Stanton Jr. of Rolling Hills. Assisting Mrs. Stanton as hostesses were her daughter Miss Ellen Stanton, and Mmes. George Mohler, John Shidler, Ronald Moran, Charles Warham, J. Russell Shae, and Anthony Nizetich. Helen Harky and Hilda Lintz were in charge of the menu. Mrs. Fred Allen was in charge of arrangements. Ticket chairmen were Dorothy Kessenick and Mmes. Jack Mitchell and James Hurst.

Mrs. Ronald E. Moran presided at the punch bowl. Mrs. Allan Bird was at the guest-book table.

Helen Richey, Florence Krekelberg, and Mmes. George Denbo, Albert Maslin, Walter H. Gillis Jr., and Robert Bodoh of Rolling Hills Estates.
