MR. MAYS JUNIOR

There have been outfielders, since Willie Mays broke into the major leagues, who have tried to impersonate the fun-loving number one ball-hawk of the San Francisco Giants.

Most of the ball chasers have tried the Willie belly catches and have come up with errors. Mr. Mays, besides being a king-pin at the plate, is the only one who has been able to roam the centerfield confines with razor-sharp accuracy.

In the past two years however, a rightfielder on the Pittsburgh Pirates has been making like a junior Willie Mays. He's currently leading the National League with a batting average that has stayed, slightly over and below .370, for some time now.

Shy One

Roberto Clemente, a Cuban by birth, is as fast as afoot as Willie but as shy as the Dodgers' Frank Howard.

When we talked with "Bob," during the World Champions' last home stand, he opened up for a few minutes prior to the game in the Pirate dugout.

The writers and fans are beginning to compare you to Willie Mays. How do you feel about the comparison?

Whatever they say is O.K. with me except maybe if they say I make the kind of money he does.

Did you conscientiously try to "copy" Willie out there in the outfield?

I learn to catch before I know he around.

English Better

To what do you attribute your present hitting success? I don't know. I hit the same way I did last year. I'm just hot. I hit high ones, outside ones, and even balls around the ankles. Looks like everything I get bat on falls in for single or double. Just lucky I guess.

I talked with you briefly in 1959. Your English seems to have improved. Did you study the language during the off season?

No. I just listen and pick up words.

Do you remember, during a Dodger-Pirate game here last year, when umpire Vinnie Smith threw you out of the game?

Yes I recall. He call me out on a ground ball. I safe. I swear at him in Spanish. He no like and tells me to say it in English. I'm mad and tell him. He points finger at me and says I'm out of game. I say more bad words in Spanish and go to dugout.

Pirates to Win

Did you get a fine slapped on you from the National League office?

No. I lucky.

Do you think the Pirates can go all the way and win the pennant?

Yes. We have good young club. Pitchers better than last year. I like extra money ballplayers get for World Series. I like to hit like this for rest of season. See you again. Got to get batting practice. Thank you mister.

It was during the early part of May that I had this interview with Roberto Clemente. At this writing the hustling young Pirate outfielder is still leading the hitters in the National League. If he keeps it up no one can say he didn't try to put the Pirates into first place.
