Torrance Teens Man Job Agency

Miss Baglio said. This committee will act as governing board of the project.

The board will support the agency by informing clubs of the services and help available through Y.E.S.

Training programs, an office for the agency, application forms, clerical supplies and adult supervision are provided by Torrance schools and the state employment office.

"In a plea for the support of local service organizations, Albino said, 'We urge you to participate in this program. Obviously, such a program such as Y.E.S. cannot exist without funds from community spirited groups. The office is in desperate need of telephone service.'

Others helping with the project are Richard Moore, Gary Hand, Judy Hannah, Frances Gerber, Paul Anthony, Judith Schafer, Carolyn Ovis, and Jim Jepsen.

NEW EYE PROTECTION FOR WORKERS AND YOUNGSTERS

Workers in eye-hazardous trades and parents of active young children who require vision correction need no longer suffer the fear of eye injury from shattering glasses, according to Dr. J. M. Soss, optometrist at 1268 Sartori in Torrance. Dr. Soss explains that a dramatic advance in eye safety has been accomplished by the development of a crystal clear, unbreakable plastic that can be made in nearly any kind of prescription for eyeglasses, including bifocals. In addition to providing priceless protection against injury and blindness, these new plastic eyeglasses are more comfortable to wear because they are less than half as heavy as glass lenses. The price is modest and easy terms are gladly offered. Those interested in true eye-protection are invited to call at Dr. Soss' office, 1268 Sartori. No appointment is necessary. Open Friday evenings and all day Saturdays. Offices also in Wilmington.
