"Death of a Salesman" at Hampton Theater

Torrance resident, Carl Rogers, has assumed the lead role of Willy Loman in "Death of a Salesman," Arthur Miller's Pulitzer Prize winner now running Friday and Saturday nights at the Hampton Players Theatre.

Rogers, whose appearances on South Bay Stages are infrequent but memorable, portrays the famous salesman who is wearied and guilt-ridden to the point of running the lives of his sons. Admittedly, the role is one of the most demanding an actor can attempt, and veteran Rogers was a natural choice. His performances in "Inherit the Wind" and "All My Sons" (another Miller drama) were acclaimed at the time and still remembered.

The cast and production crew includes many other Torrance residents. Georgia Schumacher is increasingly convincing as Willy's wife, Linda. Ed Long is the moody, explosive Biff, with Michael Parks as Happy, Willy's other son.

Each of the minor characters who unknowingly help create the conditions for Willy's tragic life make their appearances in quick, staccato-like frequency during the play. Bob Thomas, is Bernard, sissy-turned-succes. Austin Rheingold is the sympathetic neighbor, Charles, who knows Will better than most. Another Hamptonian whose duties for so long have kept him backstage is John Brady, who as Howard knows of Willy's plight, but couldn't care less.

June Duke has been absent from South Bay stages for quite some time, but returns in two roles: Jenny and Letta. Warren Dieter is Uncle Ben, who Willy would never be like. Sam Reis steps from "Separate Tables" into a comic relief, Brooklyn-speaking Stanley, assisted by Lou Van as Throckmorton. Phyllis Foss is the eye-opening "Woman" while Christine Bernard's Miss Forsythe is in contrast to her recent Maggie in "Holiday For Lovers."

The production will play Friday and Saturday for four more weeks. Reservations can be made by calling FR 5-8018. Curtain is at 8:40.

Several organizations have contracted for special nights of "Salesman" as well as future productions of "Velvet Glove" and "20th Century." Information regarding these may be secured from the Hampton resident, Mickey Hauser, FR 5-3707.

Torrance residents are encouraged to open readings for "20th Century," Monday and Tuesday, Oct. 24 and 25, 8 p.m. Casting of 25 men and 5 women. Hampton Players will hold a business meeting, Monday Oct. 17, 8 p.m. at the Hampton Theater.
