ROSELLE MEEK WITH STRONG ARM OWNERS OF NFL

What with the World Series furnishing exciting moments in sports history little attention has been given to the likes of the Los Angeles Rams, the NFL, and a young man starting his first season as prexy of the old league.

Last Sunday, on a football field in Chicago, the Halas led Bears edged the Rams to give the latter a 0-3 record for the season. While watching on TV, alternating between the Series and the football game like I did, you had no knowledge of what was happening behind what your eyes saw. A bit of Halas skulldruggery was occurring and you had to see the wire stories to get the facts, seep through them and come up with an interpretation for your readers.

At first it looked as if Bob Waterfield was making excuses for the failure of his team to win game number three. Like many Ram coaches before him, Waterfield was blasting Gorge Halas for wandering up and down the sidelines when the rules limited the mentor to a short yardage around the 50 yard line. Secondly, the Bears, said Waterfield, were mimicking Ram offensive signals and causing the Los Angeles boys to commit numerous off-side infractions. The California head coach also referred to an edict, issued by Commissioner Pete Rozelle, forbidding the Bears and Halas to resort to such practices. They, the Bears, were guilty in another game we were told.

Pall this is true, and we believe it is, Ram fans should not feel, however, that their heros should have won. After all the Bears did score 34 points, most of the time enough to win a ball game. The whole Ram team played uninspired football. Win or lose is not the subject here but rather the apparent weakness of Pete Rozelle.

Some time ago we wrote that Rozelle was not the type of man we would have liked as Commissioner over owners that were selfish and dictatorial since the inception of the inception of the since the inception of the since the since the inception of the since the National Football League. Although Bert Bell was no patsy game. before his death, owners did take liberties with him and got away with it. With Rozelle, however, the prexies of all the clubs have acted as if the office of Commissioner held by Marge Fox with a 1599 series. High games for the evening were no longer a reality. George Halas being the number one Castro-type boss man.

Foss Over Rozelle

Meanwhile, in the new American Football League, owners placed a strong-willed ex-Marine hero, former Gov. Joe Foss the helm. And by golly he's every bit what a Com- rather than the rule. Most of these stars had exaggerated styles, missioner should be. I'd go as far as to compare Foss to Judge Landis of baseball fame. Yet the NFL owners chose a man who's greatest claim to any high office in football-straight down the lane, while others had a real slow curve ball. Judge Landis of baseball fame. Yet the NFL owners chose dom was his "ability" to keep Ram owners in line during his tenure as general manager of the Los Angeles club. It is obvious that Halas, Marshall, and all the others in the NFL group wanted no part of a Foss or Landis. They wanted a "get-along" guy. To be frank, a yes-man and dear reader they got one in Pete Rozelle. Who's going to desomething about it. Alas, no one! For whatever gripe Waterfield makes to Rozelle, watered-down now that the Bear win has sunk in, it will be shelved and things will Bear win has sunk in, it will be shelved and things will go on in the same way with no interference from anyone. Rozelle likes his job and he's going to keep it. Gable House rolled a 256 game. He also holds the new Men's while Norm Belt closely follows with a 186 average.
