*'Twas the month of Christmas and all through the towns,
The people were making their shopping rounds.
Santa and Rudolph, red nose and all were filling the sleigh for their annual call.
They stopped off at Palley's and to their surprise,
The people were shopping with starts in their eyes.
'What bargains, cried Santa, I'm really amazed'.
And he did all his shopping, leaving Rudolph quite dazed.
'Away to Palley's, he shouted with glee,
For wonderful presents to put 'neath your tree."
'There are bargains galore for both young and old,
And the money you save is a sight to behold."
So hurry to Palley's where Santa will be,
And you'll find all those gifts for your Christmas spree.
The money you save will tickle you pink,
'Cause prices at Palley's are less than you think.
For one-stop shopping and a great Christmas Day,
Come see, you'll save the Palley's way.*

Governor Plans Study on Health, Juvenile Justice

Two major documents, which chart a course for California in the fields of health and juvenile justice, were delivered to Governor Edmund G. Brown's office last week. Reports, covering the research and recommendations of two outstanding citizens' commissions, were delivered as the governor neared the end of a good-will tour of South America and prepared to plunge into the work of drafting a program for the 1961 Legislature.

One report, from the Governor's Committee on the Study of Medical Aid in Health, warned bluntly that unless California plans for a balanced expansion of medical services it will face a "crisis of unmet needs, lowered quality of care and inflated costs."

The other, written by the governor's special study commission on juvenile justice, found the Juvenile Court Act of 1915 "disorganized, repetitive and frequently obscure."

IMMEDIATE STEPS
The health report recommended immediate steps to build a new State medical school and grants-in-aid for private medical schools to raise the annual number of graduates from the present 500 to 700.

By 1975, the report said, California medical schools must graduate 1340 new physicians a year in order to maintain the present ratio of doctors to patients. The report also recommended establishment of regional advisory health councils to coordinate the expansion of medical facilities.

Unless the councils are formed, the report said, California could waste $1 billion during the next 15 years by "haphazard" location of new hospitals and clinics. It also said the state should screen, grade and require labeling of medical insurance policies as a guide to consumers.

And it recommended merging California's Departments of Health and Social Welfare into a single agency.

STURDY FOUNDATION
Governor Brown, who had previewed the committee report three weeks ago, said the report provides a "sturdy foundation for planning toward a healthful future for California."

Governor Brown already has indicated he will press forward on two of the commission's recommendations. He will ask the Legislature for funds to establish a new state medical school in San Diego and he will ask that it create a coordinating authority to establish a balanced growth for medical facilities.

The juvenile justice report has been three years in the making. The commission originally was appointed by Governor Goodwin J. Knight and was reappointed by Governor Brown.

The commission's basic policy recommendation was aimed at assuring minors the same right to a fair trial that their elders already enjoy. "Basic legal rights are neither being uniformly nor adequately protected under present juvenile court provisions and procedures," the commission declared.

JUVENILE RIGHTS
It suggested juveniles be given the right to representation by counsel and that a clear line be drawn between wards of the court who are neglected or abandoned and wards who are wayward youngsters or outright delinquents.

At the present time, no such legal distinction is made, the commission said, even though 40 per cent of Juvenile Court wards today fall into the first category.

The commission also urged more attention to rehabilitation of delinquent youngsters in the supervision

It found some detention procedures in the state to be "shockin," pointing out that one youngster was held in juvenile hall for six months before he was granted a hearing. Another youngster was held in juvenile hall for the crime of "jawnwalking," it said.

The commission recommended setting a two-week limit on the time that a juvenile is held in detention, with rehabilitation, the commission said. "The quality of rehabilitative services is of questionable effectiveness and in many cases, case decisions seem to be based upon considerations of expediency and administrative convenience rather than upon the objectives of rehabilitation and social justice."

State Chamber Warns of Decline in $$$ Prestige

Concern over danger signals indicating that the prestige of the United States dollar is in jeopardy was today expressed by J. Robert White, or Los Angeles, chairman, Statewide Tax Committee, California State Chamber of Commerce.

"We are now confronted with the harsh truth that for same time this country has pursued fiscal policies which, despite the country's wealth and power, have resulted in our trying to do too much, both here and overseas."

White declared that recent events have brought this issue into sharper focus. "Foreign aid and gifts, military spending abroad, and foreign investments by U.S. firms are taking more out than we are receiving from U.S. trade abroad. Our balance of payments position has deteriorated. Labor costs in this country have been boosted to the point where we find it more difficult to sell competitively overseas."
