

Danish Art On Display At Gallery

The "Arts of Denmark," an exhibition described as "too priceless to insure" was opened to the public today after a reception last night at Municipal Art Gallery presided over by Julius Bomholt, Danish Minister of Cultural Affairs who flew to Los Angeles from Copenhagen for the occasion.

As a special representative of the Danish Government, Minister Bomholt, at the inaugural ceremony, addressed an invited audience of more than 500 dignitaries, socialites and civic leaders.

Other speakers included Mayor Samuel Yorty, A. Holstrup Pedersen, president of the Danish Society of the Arts and Crafts, A. C. Karsten, Danish Consul General and Kenneth Ross, general manager of the Los Angeles Department of Municipal Art.

The exhibition, having its final showing in the U.S. before its return to Denmark, is designed to reveal the continuity of one nation's art through 10,000 years.

The exhibition is being presented under the auspices of the Los Angeles Department of Municipal Art, and is sponsored by the Danish Government in cooperation with the Municipal Art Patrons.

Finn Juhl, internationally known designer and architect of the exhibition, personally supervised the installation of over 500 pieces collected from Royal and public museums and private collections in Denmark.

Erik Kjersgaard of the National Museum of Denmark is another member of the Danish party who is traveling with the exhibition which has been seen in New York, Chicago and in San Francisco where it had more than 250,000 visitors in its six weeks showing there.

Wider in scope than most exhibitions, arts and crafts from 8000 B.C. to the present day are included. Pre-historic weapons, jewelry, ceramics, textiles and furniture vividly show design trends continuing into contemporary times.

Tiny figures of a bear and bird carved in glowing amber between Stone Age spears, harpoons and utilitarian objects foreshadow the design and practical elegance of 20th century furniture, glass, silver, ceramics and jewelry.

Contemporary furniture and crafts fill over half of the gallery space and suggest a "Who's Who" of famed Danish Designers. One of the world's earliest wind instruments, a six-foot spiraling, s-shaped Lurs, comes from the Bronze Age. The early historian Tacitus wrote that the sound of Lurs, always blown in pairs, would frighten the wits out of an enemy. Jewelry, helmets and battle axes are reminders of intrepid Viking explorers.

A life-sized oak figure of St. George slaying the dragon, dated around 1520, dominates the whole gallery.

The "Arts of Denmark" may be seen through Oct. 29. Admission charge is 50 cents for adults and 25 cents for persons under 18. The Municipal Art Gallery is located in Barnsdall Park, 4800 Hollywood Blvd. off Vermont Avenue. The Gallery will be open from 1 to 9 p.m., weekdays, and 1 to 5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

Engle Appointed by Johnson To New Senate Committee

Sen. Clair Engle (D-Calif.) has been named to participate in a U.S. Senate study to determine how the nation can meet its constantly expanding need for more oil, gas, coal, and hydro-electric and other power resources.

Vice President Lyndon Johnson appointed Senator Engle to serve with the Senate Interior Committee which will make the study in an executive capacity.

"We take it for granted that fuel and power will be there when we want it, but certain areas of the country are already running short and it'll get worse unless we start planning now," Engle said in explaining the purpose of the study.

He pointed out, for example, that Southern California has changed from one of the nation's energy surplus areas to one with a substantial deficit in the last few years.

"This region now is importing natural gas from Texas, petroleum from the Middle East and plans are being evaluated on the feasibility of bringing Pacific Northwest hydroelectric power to Los Angeles," he said.

Engle also pointed out that the demand for crude oil in the seven Western States is running 1,386,000 barrels a day, while current production in the same area is only 832,000 barrels a day.

"We need a variety of fuels on an integrated basis, with a long look at the future and a good look at conservation," he explained, adding, "The answer doesn't rest with just more gas or oil, or just with transportation of more coal, or just with new hydro-projects in the Northwest; we need all of those things together."

The new Senate Committee study was originally authorized by Congress in Senate Resolution 105 of which Senator Engle was co-author.

Rams Meet Steelers in Los Angeles

Pittsburgh Steelers move into Los Angeles for one of their rare NFL appearances Sunday, engaging the Los Angeles Rams. KMPC and outlets of the Los Angeles Rams Radio Network will broadcast the game with Bob Kelley, Bill Brundige, and Steve Bailey calling the action. Air time will be 1:15 p.m.

Steelers, coached by Buddy Parker, have been in much the same predicament the Rams have—a rebuilding kick. This past year they have picked up some talent and boast some old friends of the Los Angeles club, namely Gene "Big Daddy" Lipscombe and one of the all-time great NFL quarterbacks, Bobby Layne. All in all, it should be an interesting conflict with the Rams looking for their initial 1961 NFL League
