

Porter Exhibits Color Photographs At Hill, Crenshaw Great Western

"The Seasons," an exhibition of 76 color photographs by photographer Eliot Porter, will open Monday at Great Western Savings and Loan Association. The show will extend through Friday, Dec. 1. The photographs will be displayed at Great Western's main office, 700 South Hill St. and the executive office, 4401 Crenshaw Blvd.

This exhibition is being made possible through the Smithsonian Institution Traveling Exhibition Service.

In these photographs, Eliot Porter depicts the four seasons of the year in landscapes and in details of the natural scene. In labels accompanying them, he has quoted from the writings of Henry David Thoreau.

Dr. Porter, who holds the M.D. degree from Harvard Medical School, became a fulltime photographer in 1939.

He applies the standards of science to his work, shunning facile and dramatic effects and striving instead for accuracy in the depiction of his subject.

As a result, his precise photographs are a delight to the naturalist.

He has discovered solutions to many technical problems confronting photographers and has written articles for such publications as the Journal of the Biological Photographic Association, U.S. Camera, Photo-Technique, and the New England Naturalist.

Twice he has been the recipient of grants from the Guggenheim Foundation.

Fearless Gets Contract From Bosing Company

The Pacific Division of Houston Fearless Corporation, Torrance, has been awarded contracts totaling $275,515 by The Bosing Company of Kansas, production center for the B-52H global ballistic missile bomber of the Strategic Air Command.

The division, which will supply the ejector pack system for the superior B-52H, has been associated with Boeing-Whitcomb production efforts since 1959.

Houston Fearless is one of 3,487 small and large first-tier subcontractors and suppliers located in 43 of the nation's 50 states and Canada engaged in the production of the powerful, eight-jet nuclear bomber.

Houston Fearless, a major "partner" in production of the nation's first and only manned ballistic missile delivery system, shares the spotlight as the B-52Hs are delivered for operational use at SAC installations.

While the Wichita facility of The Boeing Company holds responsibility for on-schedule delivery of the B-52Hs to SAC, only a comparatively small portion of the long-range weapon system is produced at Boeing's Kansas plants.

During the past year, the Boeing "team" of subcontractors and suppliers across the nation have received $201,955,543 as a result of B-52H production for the Air Force.
