

Harbor Students Present Plays By Williams

Two plays by Tennessee Williams will be presented in the Starboard Theater of Harbor College as the second Noontime Playhouse production of the year.

Performances of "Moony's Kid Don't Cry" and "The Case of the Crushed Petunias" will be staged Thursday at 12 and 2 p.m., and Friday at 1 and 3 p.m.

James Schuler and Carrie Henson will play the leads in "Moony's Kid Don't Cry." Tina Rehwal gets her first leading role as Miss Dorothy Simple in "The Case of the Crushed Petunias." Dale Reynolds has the male lead and James Schuler and Miss Henson appear again as a police officer and Mrs. Dull.

Eugene Dynarski is producer and director.

Although the plays are given during the day so that students can attend, the public is invited to the performances.

According to Reuben Plaskoff, Harbor drama instructor, the presentation of plays at noontime has met with great success. Productions in the past have ranged from the classical to the avant-garde and experimental.

The Starboard Theater is located in the Women's Gym building.

One-Woman Portrayals Come To California

Cornelia Otis Skinner, who has brought so much laughter to the world via her books and plays, is taking time out from her newest venture, to come to California for the Christmas holidays.

Miss Skinner was last seen here in the successful comedy, "The Pleasure of His Company" in which she starred with Cyril Ritchard for over two years, and which she co-authored with playwright Samuel Taylor.

Tickets are available at the auditorium box offices, and at Southern California Music Co. 737 S. Mill St. and all Mutual agencies.

NIGHT DRIVING

Limitations of night driving are more drastic than commonly believed, according to a Highway Research Board study. It was found that three hours of night driving after normal bedtime produces an uncontrollable drowsiness in nine out of 10 motorists.
