

Three El Camino Faculty Members Win School Honor

Three El Camino faculty members, all of whom will leave the college at the close of the semester hold scrolls of recognition presented at the El Camino College Faculty Association last week.

Honored were Gerhardus Snijders, who will return to Holland after four years at El Camino; Leslie Edwards, who finishes his year of work as an exchange teacher from England, and Charles Toynbee, retiring from education after nearly fifteen years at El Camino.

Awarding the scroll to "Cam" Snijders was William Johnson, a fellow English instructor.

Snijders prefaced his thanks by remarking, "It is practically impossible to take an old tree and plant it in another country—the ties of home are calling me back."

Speaking of his years spent at El Camino, Snijders spoke of the large place the college will hold in his heart and memories.

"These are not empty words. I'm sorry that I will leave so many good friends and a country that I like more and more," Snijders said.

Edwards accepted his scroll from Art Fillman, math instructor. After thanking the faculty for the many kindness shown him during his stay, Edwards concluded his acceptance, quipping, "I think I have been treated as well by ex-colonials as I can expect."

Toynbee was introduced by Willis Weber, assistant director for applied arts and pioneer faculty member at El Camino with Toynbee.

Of his fifteen years at the college Toynbee said, "I've enjoyed the whole stay—not only faculty, but administration has been kind to me in every respect. Now it's time to take a rest and have a little fun."

Toynbee and his wife will retire to his new home in Vacaville where a son will also establish his home.
