Estey Describes Organ Made in Torrance Plant

Made in a modern Torrance factory, the Estey Georgian organ is said to be the lowest priced, fully transistorized dual manual organ on the market today.

It is now in production and priced at $579.95 in mahogany and $599.95 in walnut. The Georgian features Estey's Rhythm percussion master that automatically adds rhythm patterns to the lower manual and foot pedal.

The percussion master enables an organist, even a beginner, to play swing, fox trots, or waltzes at whatever tempo he chooses.

The Georgian also has a repeating sound, completely variable in speed, on all voices on the upper manual, and 14 built-in special percussion effects.

The new Estey, made in Torrance, has four upper manual voices—flute, trumpet, oboe, and violin. There are four lower manual voices—cello, read, alto horn, and diapason, each keyboard has a solo accent tab which increases the intensity of the voices.

Other features include two tabs for pedal volume settings, soft, medium and full. There is an inclined overhanging upper manual, a 13-note pedal clavichord, and an earphone jack.

The Georgian, which has a hand-rubbed, lacquer finish in walnut or mahogany, is processed in Estey's new conveyorized finishing system in Torrance.

The Georgian cabinet features a specially-designed back panel that make the instrument easy to service. The back is fitted into a groove at the top and bottom.
