

New Crossing Signals Installed

New crossing warning signals were put into operation this week on Crenshaw Blvd. in front of the El Camino College Administration Building, reports Supervisor Kenneth Hahn.

The crosswalk is situated 671 feet south of Manhattan Beach Blvd. on Crenshaw. The signals provide protected crossing for students and college visitors.

"The signals are equipped with push-buttons for persons wishing to cross the street," Hahn explained.

When the button is pushed, flashing yellow "caution" lights will go into operation to warn approaching vehicles to let pedestrians cross.

Although the crosswalk has been provided for some time, Hahn noted that motorists unfamiliar with this section of Crenshaw had frequently continued at normal speed past the crosswalk even as students started across the street.

"The new pedestrian signals will provide ample warning to both students and approaching vehicles," emphasized Hahn.

Need for the signals was brought to Hahn's attention by student Body President Jerry Goddard of Redondo Beach and Dr. Stuart Marsee, president of El Camino.

Social Security Goes on the Air

The Torrance Social Security office, which services the entire South Bay area, will inaugurate a weekly program on "Your Social Security" over KAPP Radio (93.5) FM beginning Sunday, May 5, at 9:15 a.m.

Co-hosts will be Vincent Fitzgerald, assistant manager, and George Shimizu, field representative. Questions from the public will be welcome and should be addressed to 1408 Crenshaw Blvd., Torrance.

The Torrance office also serves the residents of Redondo Beach, Hermosa Beach, Manhattan Beach, Rolling Hills, Palos Verdes Estates, Gardena, Lawndale, Lomita and Harbor City.

Titanium, known principally for its applications in supersonic aircraft, space vehicles and missiles, is finding a new and more down-to-earth application related to the neighborhood supermarket.

Missile-Age Titanium Finds Place in Supermarket Sun

Titanium tubing, produced by Harvey Aluminum, is being fabricated into titanium bottle equipment for household bleach by Biner-Ellison Machine, Inc., Los Angeles.

"Household bleach is a five to six percent solution of a chemical known as sodium hypochlorite which releases oxygen and chlorine," said Ed Hunt, general manager of Biner-Ellison. "This is a very corrosive solution. Even the finest stainless steels are attacked at a rapid rate. To overcome this, we use 100 percent plastic and titanium construction and are supplying these machines to leading bleach manufacturers and supermarkets."

"We believe that titanium tubing has a very important future in all corrosion resisting applications," said Homer Harvey, executive vice president of Harvey Aluminum.
