

New Warehouse, Office Completed by Leonards

Construction is completed on Leonards Department Stores new warehouse and general office building, which will be on the largest warehousing facilities in the entire Southern California area. The structure was built in two stages, and encompasses 250,000 square feet, with a 1200 foot frontage on Manhattan Beach Blvd. at the corner of Freeman, in Redondo Beach.

Robert Leonard Jr., president of the company, stated that it was imperative that their warehouse and office facilities be increased to meet expanding customer demands. He said, "The completion of this structure is the culmination of our long-range plan to centralize warehousing. With the proximity to the San Diego Freeway, Leonards will be able to make deliveries to any part of the Los Angeles area with expediency."

Latest Equipment

"Plans for the new warehouse include the latest in handling equipment," according to Walter E. Sigler, executive vice president and general manager of Leonards. The Santa Fe spur track adjacent to the building will permit the direct unloading of 15 freight cars, while the truck loading docks will efficiently handle 30 trucks simultaneously. When necessary, an especially engineered ramp will permit trucks to enter directly into the warehouse. This new facility will provide for 10 times the present warehousing space.

Jerry Moss, advertising director for Leonards, states, "The lay-out and design of the building includes projected planning for the convenience and ease of conducting semi-annual warehouse promotions."

Offices

The air-conditioned building will house the executive and general offices as well as the advertising offices and the furniture and appliance buying offices. Incorporated in the plans are conference and meeting rooms which will be made available to suppliers for training sessions, in addition to being used for Leonards organizational meetings.

Stores Served

The five stores presently in the chain will be served by these new facilities. Provisions for further expansion have also been taken into consideration in the planning of the structure designed by David T. Withery Engineers of Los Angeles. The architectural design is in the modern style, highlighted by a huge, dramatic Mo-Sai panel, framed in aluminum, at the front entrance with an overhanging solid and open egg-crate canopy. Construction by the Carpenter & Smallwood Corp. is pre-cast concrete (tilt-up) type of construction with alternating pre-scored concrete walls painted in contrasting colors across the front of the building.
